Howard Jones, Coach at U.S.C., Is Dead at 55

Heart Attack Fatal to Famous Rose Bowl Champion.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.
LOS ANGELES, July 27.—Death cut short the brilliant coaching career of Howard Harding Jones today, almost on the eve of his 30th season.

The head man of the University of Southern California's Thundering Herd died on the floor of his kitchen, victim of a heart attack. He was 55.

Shocked friends said he was one of the nation's highest salaried coaches in a field where revenue is figured in the millions. He received $15,000 annually.

Notable Record.
His lifetime coaching record showed 194 victories, 65 defeats and 21 ties, for a percentage of .721. At Southern California, where he achieved his greatest fame, the standings were 121 won, 26 lost, 13 tied—a percentage of .771.

He had complained of indigestion for several days, and this morning called a doctor. A few minutes later he collapsed and was dead when the physician arrived. His widow, Jane, is in a sanitarium here. She has been in ill health for several years. She is a sister of the late William Dean, former Army All-America half-back, against whom Jones played at Yale.

The coach and his first wife, Leah, were divorced in Denver in 1926.

Son On Vacation.
Jones' son, Clark, left yesterday on a vacation trip to Alaska. Carolyn Jones, 14, the coach's daughter, was visiting friends when her father died and was not located for several hours.

Also surviving are Tad Jones, former Yale coach, and two other brothers, Tom and Clarence. Friends said the latter are living in Ohio, but they did not know where.

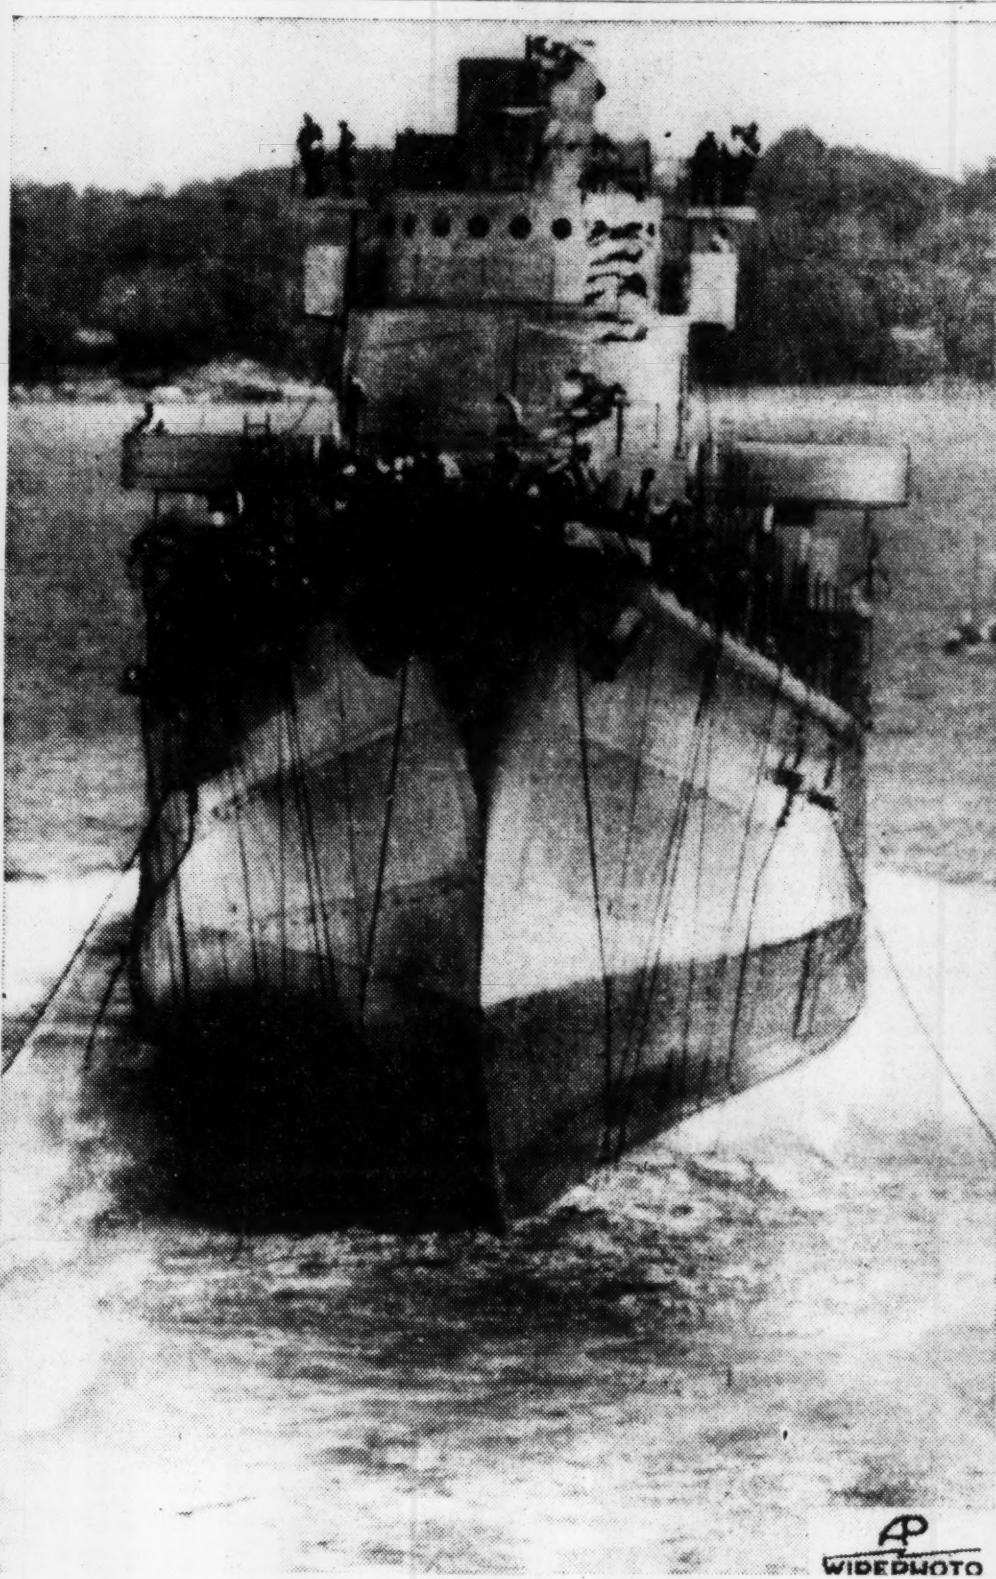

Jones, who coached at Syracuse, Yale, Ohio State, University of Iowa and Duke, came to Southern California in 1925. His Trojan teams saw five Rose Bowl engagements and won each of them—a record unmatched by any other school.

At Yale, from which he graduated in 1904, he played left end on the football team and pitched for three years on the baseball team.

The next year he returned to Continued on Page 7, Column 2.

Reds Report Smashing Aerial Victory Over Nazi Baltic Fleet

Five Craft Said Sunk; Land Assault Is Declared Stalled; Berlin Says Forces Within 45 Miles of Leningrad.

By The Associated Press.
Russia today announced a big aerial victory over the German navy and declared that in land fighting along a "gigantic and continuous" front the Red army had taken the steam out of Adolf Hitler's invasion with sharp local counterattacks.

"The blitzkrieg is a washout," the Russian press spokesman said. The Soviet war bulletin reported that the Red Air Force operating with the Baltic fleet sank two enemy torpedo boats, a submarine, two tankers and a patrol vessel in a smashing Saturday assault. On land, it said fighting raged yesterday in the sectors of Nevel, before Leningrad; Smolensk, on the road to Moscow; and Zhitomir, key bastion of the Ukraine's defenses.

Except for the fighting in the three vital gateways, the Russians said the eastern front was quiet. It is in these same areas that Hitler has thrown the weight of his panzer divisions vainly at the Soviet defenders for almost two weeks.

The war dragged into its 37th day with the Germans still engaged in the Smolensk sector 230 miles west of Moscow. Confident Russians in the Soviet capital recalled that the German army occupied Paris in 36 days during the campaign in the west in 1940.

The Red army's defense drew from an American spokesman warm praise as "magnificent." DNB, the official German news-agency, said the Nazi legions had pushed to a point 45 miles west of Leningrad and pictured Moscow as under a steady rain of destructive air bombardment. The German high command, however, with a chariness which has become habitual of late, contented itself with stating that operations were proceeding successfully all along the line.

The Russian communique did not mention the Leningrad defense zone, where it has described fierce fighting for many days, but implied that the German thrust there had about spent itself by declaring there were no major operations anywhere except in the Smolensk and Zhitomir areas.

In those two hotly-contested sectors—the one a Nazi salient aimed toward Moscow but unchanged for 12 days; the other a threat to the Ukrainian capital of Kiev—the Red army described its forces as still holding back the German with unrelenting stubbornness.

A Russian spokesman called the eastern front a "gigantic and continuous Verdun."

That Moscow had another air-raid alarm Saturday night was acknowledged, but Soviet fighter patrols, antiaircraft and balloon barrages were said to have fended off all but five to seven Nazi planes.

Standley Urges Use of Navy To Deliver Goods

Admiral Demands Drastic Action To Win Battle of Atlantic.

WASHINGTON, July 27.—(AP)—Admiral William H. Standley, retired former chief of Naval operations, urged today that American ships, guns and planes be used, if necessary, to protect delivery of supplies to Great Britain.

In an address prepared for broadcast by CBS under the sponsorship of the Committee to Defend America by Aiding the Allies, Admiral Standley continued: "This will cost us ships. It may cost us American lives. But not nearly as many ships or planes or lives as we must certainly pay if we are called upon alone to combat first: Nazi political infiltration into South America and this continent; then: Nazi commercial invasion from a Europe entirely dominated by ruthlessness; and finally, after the world conquerors have 'softened' the New World, a naval, air and land invasion supported by the combined munitions plants of the world."

Partly Cloudy Skies Forecast Here Today

Partly cloudy skies today was the weather forecast last night by the weather bureau office at Candler Field. Temperature extremes will range from 68 degrees to 90 degrees, compared with yesterday's readings of a low of 69 degrees and a high of 89 degrees.

A. L. Norris, Hopkins Says Head of Candy U. S., British Firm, Is Dead Patrols Parallel

Entered Business Here When 14 Years of Age.

Arthur L. Norris, 72, president of Norris, Inc., nationally-known candy manufacturers, died last night at his home, Sirron Farm, near Chamblee, following a brief illness.

Although he had been in robust health, and was at his office only Saturday, Norris complained yesterday morning that he did not feel well. Later in the day his condition became alarming, and members of his family called in a physician.

His death, which occurred shortly after arrival of the physician, was attributed to a heart attack.

Born in Coweta.
Mr. Norris was born in Coweta county near Newnan July 4, 1869. When 14 years of age he came to Atlanta and began work in the candy manufacturing business, which later proved to be his life's occupation.

He began work in a small shop. Later, he became affiliated with the Frank E. Block Company, and when he reached his majority was employed by the Nunnally Candy interests. He remained with them for 21 years before he decided to branch out independently.

His first factory was a combination retail and wholesale place on Edgewood avenue that occupied a space approximately 60 by 60 feet. In these early days, he made his own candy at night and during the day sold to merchants and handled a retail trade "over the counter."

He occupied two other locations, both on Edgewood avenue, before he incorporated in 1910 and moved to the corner of Hilliard street and Edgewood avenue. A modern building especially for the company was later erected on Peachtree street and occupied about 1912.

Charity Worker.
Mr. Norris was a Mason and a Shriner, having taken both the York and Scottish rites, an Elk, a member of the Kiwanis Club, the Masonic Club, the Chamber of Commerce, the Capitol City Club, and the Peachtree Road Methodist church.

Though it is not generally known, he was an active charity worker, and had been identified with gifts through his family to the Georgia Children's Home and the Home for the Friendless.

Because of early training in Coweta county, Norris was a great lover of shrubs and flowers. Several years ago he established a small nursery at his home 16 miles from Atlanta, near Chamblee. It broadened out to such an extent that it became prominent as the Sirron Nurseries and is today nationally known.

He is survived by his wife and three children, Mrs. Marie Massa, Mrs. J. C. Ahern, both of Atlanta, and J. D. Norris, production manager for Norris Candy Company. In addition to these there are three grandchildren, E. A. Massa Jr., J. C. Ahern Jr., and Arthur Norris Ahern.

Funeral arrangements will be announced by H. M. Patterson & Son.

Declares Navies Have One Aim—To Guard Lifeline.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.
LONDON, July 27.—Harry L. Hopkins, President Roosevelt's lease-lend co-ordinator, declared tonight that British and American ships "are patrolling on parallel lanes with only one object in view—to guard the world's lifeline."

"Even now as I speak sleek gray destroyers flying the American flag are plunging their bows into the waters of the North Atlantic," Hopkins said. "Once upon a time this mighty ocean separated us. Now it joins us."

(Hopkins did not amplify his reference to British and American ships but it was recalled that in announcing the arrival of U. S. forces in Iceland this month, President Roosevelt said in a special message to congress that he had ordered the Navy to take necessary steps to insure the safety of communications in the approaches to the United States as well as on the seas between the United States and all other strategic outposts.)

All Possible Aid.
Hopkins pledged all possible aid—"and immediately"—to Russia in her war with Germany and pictured Germany as caught between two hostile camps supplied by America.

He linked Russia and China in the same statement and said that the United States program of turning out bombers for Britain is "far advanced and Hitler will not be able to move his factories far enough to the east to escape their devastating power of destruction."

The speech was to a British radio audience. Hopkins, who is in Britain examining defense needs as a representative of President Roosevelt, said the President had instructed him to find out exactly what Britain needed for her war effort.

Can Supply Needs.
"I have found out that there are certain things which you need in order to fight this war for the democracies," he said. "I am confident America can supply them." "During the last several months airplanes now numbering in the thousands, made in American factories, have been flown or shipped across the Atlantic. These range from the largest bombers to the fastest fighters. They are in combat now."

Hopkins said the United States already had sent several hundred tanks, with more on the way, and had transferred ships, oil tankers and food supplies "and a thousand miscellaneous articles all important to the war effort."

"Until now the people of Britain have not been told all of the details of just what help America has given you," he told his listeners.

"The publication of the exact amount of material which has already arrived here might give valuable information to the enemy and might jeopardize the lifeline stretching from Canada and America to Britain."

Lifeline Stronger.
"Now that lifeline is much stronger. No enemy action can stop the ceaseless tide of ships coming here daily, this time laden with something more substantial than hopes and sympathy. 'People of England, people of Britain, people of the British commonwealth of nations! You are not fighting alone. Your prime minister asked us for tools. I promise you that they are coming; that the endless assembly belt stretches from our western coast to this island to the Middle East; that nothing will be allowed to interfere with the full efficiency of this supply line.'"

"An enormous amount of war material which is en route now will reach here safely. President Roosevelt promised me that he will take steps to insure delivery Continued on Page 3, Column 4.

WINS CONTRACT—Miss Sue Thomas, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kincaid Thomas, and niece of Mr. and Mrs. Ivan Allen Sr., of Atlanta, has signed with Paramount Pictures for a role in "Reap the Wild Wind," her parents learned in a telegram from Hollywood received recently.

Dalton Beauty Gets Film Role At Paramount

Sue Thomas Given Contract for Part in 'Reap the Wild Wind.'

Miss Sue Thomas, slender, blonde debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kincaid Thomas, of Dalton, Ga., has signed a contract with Paramount Pictures to appear in a new film, "Reap the Wild Wind," her parents disclosed yesterday.

Miss Thomas was given a chance in pictures after a visit to Hollywood during which she was interviewed by Frank Freeman, former Atlantan, now a Paramount executive.

Freeman was said to have been greatly impressed with Miss Thomas' acting ability as well as her beauty. She has studied dramatics at the Marjorie Webster School in Washington. She was "Miss Dalton" at the Chattanooga Centennial last year, was presented at the Cotton Ball during the Chickamauga Dam celebration, and recently portrayed 18 characters in a recital at Dalton.

Athletic in type, she is fond of golf, tennis, swimming, badminton and horseback riding.

Her part in "Reap the Wild Wind," a story of Charleston and Key West in the old sailing ship days, will be a supporting role in which she portrays a southern girl of the early 1800s, Paulette Goddard is star of the picture, which will be directed by Cecil B. DeMille.

Miss Thomas, a niece of Mr. and Mrs. Ivan Allen Sr., of Atlanta, and granddaughter of Mrs. R. G. Hunt, of Griffin, is the great-granddaughter of Bryan M. Thomas, officer in the Confederate Army for whom the Dalton chapter of the U. D. C. is named.

Helen Morgan Married Informally (in Slacks)

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., July 27. (AP)—Helen Morgan, the night club singer, and Lloyd Johnson, Los Angeles businessman, were married today in an informal—to put it mildly—Sunday afternoon ceremony.

Dressed in slacks, they said their vows at the edge of the Dempsey-Vanderbilt hotel swimming pool while an overflow crowd pressed in from all sides. The orchestra from the hotel's night club, where the bride has just completed an engagement, provided the music—not forgetting to play "My Bill" and thus winning the approval of the singer's many admirers.

Early Invasion Of Thailand by Japs Indicated

Tokyo Is Preparing Feverishly for Opportunistic Move.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.
Reuters, British news agency, reported yesterday from Batavia that the Netherlands East Indies officially announced suspension of foreign exchange transactions with Japan.

The announcement, Reuters declared, said all exports to Japan, Manchoukuo, China and French Indo-China would require special licenses in the future.

Japan will station a powerful force within striking distance of Thailand when she lands troops, numbering at least 24,000, in southern Indo-China. It was reported meanwhile, by a reliable source.

Moves Feverishly
(Japan is making feverish preparations for an opportunistic move in either of two directions, south into Thailand or northward into Siberia, operatives of the Chinese intelligence service said in Chungking, China.)

Preparations for housing approximately 12,000 troops on the outskirts of Saigon, the commercial metropolis of southern Indo-China, were under way. One camp will be at near-by Bienhoa airport.

Eight thousand troops will be garrisoned at Phnompenh, the capital of the Cambodian kingdom which borders Thailand, it was reported.

Phnompenh is the key to the interior of southern Indo-China. From that city a railway and modern highway run northward to Sisophon, well inside the Thailand border which was established last March when an ultimatum imposed a Japanese peace upon Thailand and Indo-China.

Other Garrisons.
Informants said Japan also would have garrisons at other key points in Cambodia, possibly even closer to the Thailand boundary, as well as at various points along the coast south of Saigon.

Informal sources said there was a possibility that the Japanese already had landed a small garrison at Tourane in northern Indo-China, an important port and railway city only 150 miles from Yulinkong, Japanese base at the southern tip of Hainan island.

READY FOR DRIVE IN EITHER DIRECTION
CHUNGKING, China, July 27.—(AP)—Japan is making feverish preparations for an opportunistic move in either of two directions, south into Thailand or northward into Russia's Siberia, operatives of the Chinese intelligence service reported today.

Close upon her moves to occupy air and naval bases in French Indo-China, Japan presented demands for Thailand to join the Japanese "new order" in east Asia, said a statement by the National Military Council, which made public the intelligence reports.

At the same time, the Japanese were said to have drafted a quar-

Hillbillies Form Music Body To Rival ASCAP

Cowhand Crooners and Mountain Music Makers Band Together.

FRANKTON, Ind., July 27.—(AP) Hillbilly and cowboy musicians from far and wide set about today forming a rival organization to the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers (ASCAP).

This Hoosier town of 829 inhabitants was full of booted, bright-shirted cowhand crooners, old fiddlers of all ages, yodelers, one-man bands and quartets.

Len Trissell, Frankton's justice of the peace and a ventriloquist, invited the hillbilly musicians in to put into effect his idea of forming the American Composers, Entertainers and Songwriters (ACES), which, he said, would foster "real American folksongs."

So they laid down the fiddle and the bow, the mouth harp, the guitar, the washboard, the zither, the kazoo and the tissue-papered comb.

And they sat down in the high school gymnasium to start their association—to bring close harmony out of a welter of parliamentary law.

They got in town yesterday. They came from out on the lone prairie and "way up thar" in the mountain—and from Ohio, Kentucky and Illinois, and New Jersey and Oklahoma.

"ASCAP says," Trissell declared, "membership is not available to mere aspirants and sets itself up as a sole judge of who is a 'qualified' composer, author, artist or publisher."

"Yet the world's greatest music and most successful songs are products of 'aspirants'."

Always Look For the Name Du Pont For Quality!

The House Paint That Endures
It's brilliantly white, tough, durable, Du Pont House Paint keeps houses bright because it stays cleaner. Here's why—
Du Pont Prepared Paint forms a tough, durable film which protects the surface from rust, rot or decay. Like all paints, it collects dirt on exposure to the elements. As time goes on, however, a fine white powder forms on the surface of this new paint. This powder is washed away by heavy rains, carrying the dirt with it, and exposing a fresh white surface. This "self-cleaning" process starts after a few months of exposure under normal conditions of weather, but may be delayed under unusual climatic or dirt-collecting conditions. Because the "self-cleaning" process is gradual, the wearing qualities of the film are not abnormally affected.

Philippines Army Prepares For Emergency

Island Force Commanded by General MacArthur Well Equipped.

WASHINGTON, July 27.—(AP) President Roosevelt's order consolidating United States and Commonwealth forces in the Philippines under General Douglas MacArthur was viewed in official quarters here today as a step to make secure a base for any necessary operations in the far Pacific.

In co-operation with British and Netherlands Indies forces, military authorities explained, American forces in the Philippines could at least give pause to any threat of a southward attack by the Japanese, regardless of support from the main United States fleet.

The island forces under MacArthur's command have been built up energetically in recent months, but even so, officials here do not view them as potential expeditionary units.

Offshore Operation.
Any need for offshore operation, they said, could be answered largely by aviation, such as the long-range, four-engine bombers of the Army and the Navy's big flying boats. Both types are capable of covering the 1,000 miles to Indo-China—bisecting the sea lane south through the China sea.

From northern Luzon, the island on which Manila is located, it is less than 600 miles to make conjunction with the defenders of British Hongkong. And from the southern island of Mindanao a string of islands with air bases reaches down to the oil-producing Netherlands island of Borneo.

At least one squadron of naval patrol planes already is in the Philippines. Although there has been no word that four-motored land planes are on the islands, 21 of these latest type warplanes recently were flown to Hawaii. From Hawaii, the Philippines are

Germany Bomb London After Month of Quiet

Raid Seen as Retaliation for RAF Assault on Berlin.

LONDON, (Monday), July 28.—(AP)—The German Air Force raided London today in apparent retaliation for the RAF assault on Berlin Friday night, dropping bombs in at least two districts and causing some casualties.

It was London's first air raid alarm since June 27 and the first time since mid-May that bombings have been reported within the city.

The raid got off to a late start at 2 a. m. and the all-clear signal came two hours later.

The booming sound of the raiders and the roar of anti-aircraft fire with which Londoners have grown so familiar in the last year were clearly audible, but long spells of total quiet indicated that comparatively few planes were participating.

Many Londoners in night-clothing moved from their bedrooms to ground floors or basements.

F. D. R. Joins In Prayer for Peace To Win

Dispatches MacArthur Nomination for Submission to Senate.

By DOUGLAS B. CORNELL.
HYDE PARK, N. Y., July 27.—(AP)—President Roosevelt joined today in a prayer that the God of peace "overrule the forces of tyranny and aggression" rampant in the world even as a new step was taken to make effective American counter-diplomacy against Japan.

The prayer was offered by the Rev. Frank R. Wilson at morning services in St. James Episcopal church, the place of worship of the Roosevelt family.

After the services, it was learned that the chief executive had dispatched to Washington, for submission to the senate tomorrow, the nomination of Douglas MacArthur to be lieutenant general in charge of a newly designated Army of the Far East. MacArthur's designation was announced in Washington yesterday.

Confirmation of the nomination would be regarded as indirect senate approval of the President's ordering all the Philippine armed forces into the service of the United States in an obvious reply to Japan's occupation of southern Indo-China, and possibly as an endorsement of the administration's stiffer policy in the Far East.

For the services the rector borrowed a British prayer used during the first World War to ask that the Lord look in his mercy "on those who are called to the task of special peril on land, in the air, on the sea, or beneath the sea."

Brookhaven Civic Club Studies School Problem

Members of the Brookhaven Civic Club, at their meeting Wednesday night, will discuss proposed improvements at the Brookhaven school. They will also consider taking funds out of their treasury and expending them on school improvements.

The Brookhaven school is badly overcrowded, and due to a new ruling of Fulton county school officials not to take students living outside Fulton county, Brookhaven will be more congested than ever, it was said.

The Army IN GEORGIA

"What bum got off with my diary?"

The roar of heavy engines and the whines of rolling tires began echoing over Fort Benning this week as thousands of troops left the garrison on the first leg of the long motor march to Louisiana.

Troops of the nondivisional units at the garrison gathered before dawn at various concentration points and rolled out of the post on schedule Saturday with the majority of the units taking Route 80 to Demopolis, Ala., the first overnight stop.

Between now and August 10 most troop units at Fort Benning will be moving out for protracted periods of absence because of participation in the summer maneuvers.

Fort Benning's two divisions—the motorized Fourth and the Second Armored Division—will move under divisional march tables. Nondivisional units, which at Benning aggregate the strength of a third division, have announced march plans.

LIUENTENANT LEITCH GETS TRANSPORT POST

First Lieutenant James John Leitch, Infantry Reserve, has been ordered to active duty, and assigned to the Atlanta Quartermaster Depot. Lieutenant Leitch reported to Colonel T. L. Before being called to the colors, Lieutenant Leitch was connected with the Chevrolet Motor Company.

BENNING CONSUMES TONS OF ICE CREAM

A virtual paradise for the average American boy would be to surround him with the tons of ice cream consumed by Fort Benning soldiers during May and June.

An estimate of the ice cream eaten in post exchanges and in Benning mess halls showed that 17,346 gallons were consumed in June, it was disclosed yesterday. Even this amount was less than the amount enjoyed in May, when 17,871 gallons went down the throats of soldiers.

Officers consumed 1,334 gallons at messes during June, 11,445 gallons were distributed through post exchanges and 4,767 gallons were eaten in mess halls, a breakdown on the estimate revealed.

BENNING 'CHUTISTS FEATURED ON AIR

Parachute troops at Fort Benning were featured yesterday over a nation-wide hookup of Columbia Broadcasting Company stations in one of a series of programs called the "Spirit of '41."

Action dealing with the parachute troops included a mass jump, with air corps units at Lawson field co-operating to add realism to a simulated battle. Announcers were Burgess Meredith, film actor, and John Charles Daly, of the CBS special events staff.

The personnel making the New York-Atlanta leg of the Fort Benning trip by plane, arrived at the post Saturday and held a rehearsal assisted by Captain William T. Ryder, of the Parachute group.

Following his broadcast at Fort Benning, Meredith came to Atlanta and made a personal appearance last night on the stage of the Fox theater, where he is currently costarring with Ginger Rogers in "Tom, Dick and Harry."

Imperilled Credit Ended With Easy Repayment Loan

New Plan Offered By Old Loan Company

Because of a new plan just adopted by one of Atlanta's leading private financial institutions, those who are worried by a lot of disturbing old bills can get sufficient money to pay up all debts.

With the high cost of living, many people find it difficult to pay creditors enough to satisfy each of them, but by getting a loan and paying up everything, the one monthly repayment on the loan is low enough to be handled without pinching the budget too much.

Loans made under this new plan can vary from $50.00 to $1,000.00. If desired, terms of repayment can be handled for twelve months, or if lower payments are preferred, over a two-year period. All transactions are strictly confidential, and charges are at legal rates.

Security can be easily arranged because loans are on plain note, endorsement, auto, furniture, or almost anything of value.

Readers of this advertisement are cordially invited to visit the friendly office of the Southern Security and Investment Corporation on the fourth floor of the 22 Marietta Street Building. Each problem is handled on its own merits, and a most satisfactory answer to every problem.

Japan's Thrust Into Thailand Now Indicated

ter of a million men into service between July 7 and 18, and swelled the forces in Manchoukuo and Korea to 17 full divisions.

These forces are in position to be moved up to a new front in Siberia should the Japanese decide the course of the German-Russian conflict was favorable to an incursion.

In connection with the demands upon Thailand, it was said the Japanese were offering to obtain for her all of Laos and Cambodia, adjoining provinces in Indo-China, if the Thais will co-operate.

Advantageous Bases.
Presumably, Japan is looking for advantageous air and naval stations in Thailand, whence later attacks might be directed either against British Malaya and Singapore or Burma and the Burma Road, China's overland lifeline.

Thailand, western neighbor to Indo-China, was the beneficiary of the border peace last March which Japan imposed upon Indo-China, forcing cession of parts of Laos and Cambodia provinces. As an outgrowth of that peace, Japan agreed to guarantee the new Indo-Chinese frontiers.

To fulfill her contract, Japan last week announced a "joint defense" of the colony against what the Japanese press said were British, Free French and Chinese threats.

The Japanese were said to be maintaining troop concentrations at Formosa and Hainan Islands for any quick move southward, while 20 fully loaded transports were said to have moved southwest from Canton last week, presumably to occupy newly acquired air and naval bases in southern Indo-China.

One Chinese report said three cruisers, 23 submarines and two aircraft carriers left a Japanese base last week, presumably to take part in the Indo-China operation.

Chinese operatives, who are said to lurk in the vicinity of every Japanese air and military base, sometimes tipping Chungking off to coming air raids as soon as the planes leave the ground, meanwhile reported that vast quantities of army uniforms, munitions and gasoline are being shipped to Manchoukuo and Korea.

Technicians Drafted.
Technicians are being drafted into the Manchoukuo garrison to raise the divisions to full strength, it was said, and recruits between the ages of 20 and 21 and reservists from 29 to 30 were said to have been called up.

Heavy air force concentrations east of Harbin in northern Manchoukuo were reported.

The Japanese navy was said to have been engaged in mining the waters in Tsuchima strait, between Japan and Korea, presumably to protect shipments and troop movements from attack by Russian submarines based at Vladivostok in event of war with the Soviet.

Independent reports from Peiping, in Japanese-occupied North China, said the death penalty has been threatened for railway workers permitting military information to leak out.

It was reported that the Japanese military authorities had ordered the speedy conversion of 500 freight cars into flat cars suitable for transportation of tanks and artillery.

All available flat cars were said to have been concentrated at Changsinien, 24 miles southwest of Peiping, to transport materials from a huge railway construction base which the Japanese were hurriedly dismantling. Apparently the rails and other materials were being sent northward into Manchoukuo.

Peiping agents also said extensive northward troop movements were underway and that at least half of one Japanese division had been moved out of North China to Manchoukuo up to a week ago.

It was recalled that General Yasuji Okamura, North China commander-in-chief, recently made an inspection trip to Inner Mongolia, which adjoins the Soviet protectorate of Outer Mongolia.

Man Wounded In Attack on Oil Attendant

Hoyt Martin Says Negro Advance on Him With Knife.

When he is alleged to have advanced on Herman and Hoyt Martin, operators of a service station at Piedmont and Forrest avenue, last night with an open knife, Percy Mahone, Negro, of a Butler street address, was shot four times, police were told.

Mahone was taken to Grady hospital suffering from bullet wounds in the arm, chest and shoulder. His condition is fair. Radio Patrolmen T. H. Leathers and W. E. Belcher reported that Herman Martin had a heated argument with the Negro yesterday afternoon. Mahone, police were told, left the service station and threatened to return.

After the altercation, Hoyt Martin was called to the service station. He told the officers he reached the station just before Mahone came up with a knife in his hand. Hoyt Martin said he shot the Negro when the latter refused to halt.

A technical charge of disorderly conduct and shooting was placed against Hoyt Martin. He was released on his own recognizance.

Atlanta Is Injured In Auto-Trolley Crash

When the automobile he was driving collided with a street car early last night, A. R. Mincey, of 8 Lovelace avenue, N.W., sustained severe injuries to his head and shoulders. At Grady hospital, where he was taken following the accident, physicians pronounced his condition as critical.

Mincey, Fulton County Policemen C. E. Slat and Edd McGill reported, collided with a trolley car at the intersection of Hollywood road and the Bankhead highway.

Japan To Ease Freezing Order As U. S. Does

Efforts Toward Greater East Asia Urged by Minister.

TOKYO, July 27.—(AP)—Japan's new finance minister, Matsuno Ogura, declared today that the urgent thing for Japan to do, now that an economic struggle has started with the United States and Britain, is to "forge ahead toward establishment of the greater east Asia co-prosperity sphere."

He made the statement in an interview with the Japanese press while aboard a Tokyo-bound train at Osaka, returning from the Isle Grand Shrines where he had gone to pray after assumption of the finance ministry in the third Kono government July 18.

Ogura, a prominent industrialist, has been called "the Knudsen of Japan."

Domestically, the big Japanese news agency, circulated the following version of Ogura's remarks:

"The freezing by the United States of Japanese assets and British abrogation of Japanese-Indian and Japanese-Burmese trade pacts had been surmised beforehand.

Acts to Prove Painful.
"The government therefore was left in position to make appropriate counter-measures and there is no need for concern over the British-American steps.

"Furthermore, the reciprocal measures taken by Britain and the United States will eventually prove painful to the two countries so long as Japan's economic potentiality remains sound and strong.

"Fortunately the vast sphere of east Asia with Japan, Manchoukuo and China as the center, is blessed with an abundance of human and material resources. Therefore the primary thing for Japan to do is to forge ahead toward fulfillment of the colossal task of establishing the east Asia co-prosperity sphere.

"It is quite certain that Japan's economic potentiality is much stronger. So I consider it imperative and necessary to perfect the wartime system at the earliest moment possible in order that the national economic power may be most effectively displayed on a well-planned basis."

A "super emergency" was his term for the situation.

Life, Death Struggle.
Freezing of assets of British and American nationals in retaliation for Washington and London action against Japanese assets was a development in what the newspaper called a life and death struggle.

"Elasticity will be given" in enforcement, a ministry statement said, in the "light of actual American application of the assets freezing decree against Japan in that country."

The effect upon exports of silk and imports of oil is a question. Newspapers say that if American oil is withdrawn, Japan likely must turn elsewhere for the fuel. The only other source immediately available is described as the Netherlands East Indies.

of goods consigned to Britain. Our President does not give his word lightly."

Hopkins pledged aid for Russia and China, saying: "Nor do we forget to look towards the East where China is battling valiantly against forces which menace democracy. Neither are we forgetful of the magnificent fight which the people of Russia are putting up in defense of their homeland."

"We in America are determined to give all possible aid to China and Russia—and immediately."

"I arrived here from America one week ago on business. My business is the same as that of every other American from the President of the United States to the man who drives a rivet or runs a lathe in an airplane factory in Los Angeles or Buffalo."

"That business is the safeguarding of our heritage of freedom of thought and action. Right now Hitler is seriously threatening this heritage of ours which is yours."

"Like most Americans I feel that our way of life and our country is threatened by Hitler. Like most Americans I feel that your fight is a fight for freedom in the world and that it must not and will not fail."

"We in America may be 3,000 miles away but today the Atlantic ocean is merely a channel," Hopkins said. "A bridge of friendship spans it; a bridge of sympathy and admiration extends from Washington to London and although perhaps you cannot see this bridge it is so strong that all the power of darkness and Nazi terrorism cannot destroy it."

"Your prime minister and my President are 3,000 miles apart but we no longer measure distance in miles; after all the Hun is only 21 miles from Dover and yet he and his pagan way of life are 2,000 years away from Dover."

Hopkins said he would return shortly to Washington to report to President Roosevelt.

ALL EYES UPON FAR EAST—With the thrust of Japan southward toward Indo-China, interest of the world has been centered on the Far East. Smashing Air Blow at Nazi Navy Claimed and Saturday alone, 138 of them on the ground, and asserted the Luftwaffe was active even up to the Arctic shores around Murmansk.

Overnight action was said by Moscow to have been confined to the central and southern sectors of the big battle front, that is the Smolensk area west of Moscow and the Zhitomir region, west of Kiev, capital of the Ukraine.

The fighting was heavy in those two zones, the Soviet information bureau said.

Stabilization of the western front was indicated at the start of the sixth week of the war as Red army authorities reported "there were no major operations in the other directions and sectors. Military dispatches, however, told of sharp Soviet raids approaching the proportions of counterattacks."

For a week Soviet communiques have reported stubborn combat in the region of Zhitomir, iron-working and brewing city of 70,000 which is on rail and highway approaches to Kiev, the Ukrainian capital.

For 12 days there has been bloody conflict at the Smolensk wedge which the Germans drove toward Moscow in a renewal of the invasion launched June 22.

Penkho and Nevel strategic points of the Leningrad defense zone which were cited only yesterday as the scenes of heavy fighting, were not specifically mentioned and a stalemate was implied.

"Our air force delivered blows to the motorized and mechanized forces of the enemy and to his air-dromes," the Red communique said.

Reports in Conflict.
Renewing the nocturnal attacks started last Monday night, at least 100 Luftwaffe planes struck at this camouflaged capital, but a Soviet communique declared that only from five to seven broke past the night fighter patrols, ground guns and balloon barrages.

(Nazi military dispatches asserted about 250,000 pounds of explosives and "many thousands of pounds of incendiaries" were dropped in the raid. The German high command said transport and supply facilities were attacked with telling effect.)

It was officially announced that the Luftwaffe made 12 attempts between July 20 and July 26 to raid Leningrad, but that the Germans were driven off each time. Plane losses in these encounters were listed as 41 to 8 in Russia's favor.

Vice Commissar S. A. Lozovsky of foreign affairs said reports were received that the Germans were transferring forces from Africa to the eastern front, causing friction with the Italians.

(Three or more German divisions, largely mechanized, are reported to have participated in the spring drive which pushed most of Britain's desert invasion army back into Egypt from Libya. A British garrison at the Port of Tobruk, however, has held out under siege as a menace to Axis supply lines for 31-2 months.)

Difficulties of German supply details in Soviet territory were presented by the Soviet communique in a purported letter from a Nazi tank column commander, Major Meltzer, for the headquarters of the 18th German tank division, pleading for the dispatch of provisions under strong escort. The letter was said to have been seized by guerrillas.

Ecuadorian Defeat Claimed By Peruvians

Three Outposts Are Captured in Battle, Lima Says.

LIMA, Peru, July 27.—(AP)—Bloody repulse of 5,000 "invaders of our national territory" and capture of three Ecuadorian outposts were reported here today as Peru delayed her official answer to a tripartite request for a halt in border hostilities.

The foreign office declared it had not yet replied definitely, but that it would after consulting the chief executive and other ministers concerned.

(Undersecretary of State Summer Welles announced in Washington yesterday that Peru had agreed to setting a definite time and date for ending of her hostilities with Ecuador.)

Headquarters of Peru's northern army said a battle which started July 22 in the Zarumilla river basin had ended in the defeat of Ecuadorian infantry, engineering and artillery units and Peruvian occupation of their positions at Chacras, Huacillas and Balsalito. It said the Ecuadorians left six officers and 52 soldiers dead on the field and mentioned the death of only one Peruvian, Lieutenant Juan Hoyle.

"War booty captured on the banks of the Zarumilla," the communique set forth, "included 101 rifles, 100,000 rounds of rifle ammunition, 1,000 aircraft shells, two Bren guns, 11 light machine-guns, 200 rounds of machine-gun ammunition, 200 hand grenades, several thousand dum-dum bullets, telephonic implements, two wireless stations, artillery shells, steel helmets and complete musical instruments for two Army bands."

Politics and the Men

Testing before the House Military Committee, General George C. Marshall, chief of staff of the Army, branded as dangerous sabotage the organized effort to have drafted protest to congressmen and other government officials against extending the service of the selectees, reservists, and National Guardsmen. General Marshall quoted General Hugh Drum, commander of the First Army, as reporting that "countless outside forces" had gone among the members of the First Army, urging their signatures to a petition to be sent to congress.

These vicious efforts to defeat American preparedness, being observed and understood, will be forestalled, but are none the less harmful to Army morale.

In the Army, as in education, politics is a disastrous pursuit, since the founding of this nation the armed forces of our country have been kept free of the stultifying and deadening influence of political meddling. The commissars of the Russian divisions, propagandizing by terror and intrigue, have not increased the efficiency of that body. American armies must be maintained free of politics.

Every soldier, this being a working democracy, is decidedly entitled to his opinions on all governmental affairs; enlistment does not mean mental slavery. But the success of military operations is the success of obedience and faith.

The selectees understand that whatever disposition is made of them will be for nothing but the good of the country they are sworn to protect. Patriotic Americans understand this, too, and will condemn any effort to disrupt Army morale by turning the armed forces into a political club.

A great man is one whose neighbors never found out about him.

The fellow up the street says a wife thinks a luxury is something her husband has.

A New War Starts

A nation's heart goes out to that absent-minded Illinois tourist who drove 30 miles through Virginia before he noticed his wife was missing from the car.

A gallant state trooper reunited the couple near the historic city of Winchester, to resume a journey through the old Shenandoah battleground in a frame of mind that promised bitter and lasting memories.

To the trooper, the husband lamely explained he had failed to see his wife get out of the car to go into a rest room while he was having his gas and oil checked. When an unaccountable silence from the rear seat caused him to realize he was driving alone, his only thought was that she had been thrown out on a curve.

Such an explanation might satisfy a highway patrolman in a state where they go out of their way to be hospitable to tourists but, unfortunately for this gentleman who puts too much confidence into the operation of centrifugal force on a curve in a highway, he is scheduled to share his breakfasts and dinners for the rest of his life, not with a gullible policeman, but with a woman who knows how to grind an apology to bits with a crushing "Fancy that!"

We suggest a colonial doghouse for this poor lad in Illinois; one of those lofty doghouses with white columns, old Virginia fashion, lending a stately dignity to the view from the road. A permanent home like that deserves some architectural study. That lad will have earned a fitting atmosphere if he ever, ever gets a chance to lift a tinkling glass with a few of his vocal friends in a quavering plea to "Carry Me Back to Ol' Vir-ginny."

Remember back when you could actually keep up with the affairs of the day?

The main thing we've gotten from recent news-casts is that somebody's lying.

There are no women leaders, says some blind somebody who never saw Her leading Him around . . . by the nose.

Temptation used to be something you ran from instead of trying on.

The People Are Unchanged

As we watch, with bated breath, the development, day after day, of the world picture, we are too apt, sometimes, to express astonishment at situations which a little knowledge and a little thought would have told us in advance were altogether likely to develop.

Today the world is marveling at the resistance put up by the Red armies of Russia before the attempted Nazi blitzkrieg across that country. Yet, if we had but remembered, we would have known the common people of Russia have always fought with utmost heroism and sacrifice to defend their own.

True, they have been betrayed, time and again, by incompetence of leadership, by fraud and graft of their officialdom. During the first World War the common soldiers of Russia were armed with pitchforks, many of them. With guns that lacked ammunition. The shells that should have loaded those guns had not been provided, the money instead had enriched sycophants of the czarist court. Of course, under such circumstances, their fight was hopeless, but they fought to the death, hundreds of thousands of them, before they were compelled to sign the treaty of Brest-Litovsk.

The breakdown of France, in 1940, was inevitable, once the Fifth Columnists and false leaders had gained firm foothold in the political hegemony of that sad land. But the people of France are unchanged. Give them but the opportunity and they will repeat, if necessary, the heroism of Verdun. The Free French forces under de Gaulle give assurance of that.

The world marveled at the courage of the British people under merciless Nazi bombing of their cities. But that fortitude was always there. It was no new quality. It required but the coming of the Luftwaffe to call it into active being.

Likewise, sad though it be to relate, there should be no surprise at the hold which Hitler has gained over the people, particularly the youth, of Germany. For the quality of blood lust, the mad dreams of world conquest, have always been an integral part of the German people. Of the last five wars which have ravaged Europe, they have been responsible for all five.

Does anyone believe, for one moment, that an American Hitler could create among the youth of America that same lust for war, for conquest and for world dominance that today inspires almost the entire youth of Germany? Any who do are but foolish. For the youth of this nation are of the qualities of peace. They fight only when they must, in defense of home and country.

The history of Germany tells us why it was possible for Hitler and his blood-thirsty crew to gain so firm a hold upon that nation. It is hard to admit, but it is true, too, that only when the spirit of all Germany has been changed to a spirit that thinks always in terms of peace, will the menace to world security be removed.

Likewise, the Japanese people contain within their national characteristics that urge to conquest, to mastery, which must be driven out, before the Orient can ever know lasting peace.

Of recent weeks the state of Georgia has been daubed with new infamy because of the vicious appeal to racial intolerance and sectional prejudice launched by her so-called leader.

But we must remember, with gratitude, that the people of Georgia, as a whole, are unchanged. The vast majority of them still cling to the motto of their state, "Wisdom, Justice and Moderation," and that firm public belief will survive long after those who have tainted the state's escutcheon have passed away.

And, despite evil tendencies in some peoples, we must always remember that the natural progress of mankind, everywhere, is upward. That individual man, wherever and whatever he may be, instinctively longs for a life of freedom and a life of peaceful security.

That deep longing of the human race remains steadfast, unchanged, always.

And it is the rock upon which this sadly strayed world will some day find salvation.

All the world loves a cheerful giver and 99.9 per cent of it will take advantage of him.

"Lives of great men all remind us . . ."—we all have to go to one of two places eventually.

Georgia Editors Say:

A PROBLEM FOR FIREMEN.
(From The Vidalia Advance.)

Many times the local fire department has pointed out the great handicap and danger to life and property caused by spectators following the fire truck when it is answering a call, and then congregating around the scene of the fire, where they can be of no help, where they are not wanted. Yet, regardless of this co-operation asked by the firemen, many people persist in following them every time a call is made—a very rude practice, and one endangering the lives of many, as well as retarding the efficiency with which the firemen would like to work.

We are not making recommendations as to what the firemen might do to stop this uncalled-for practice, but if the people will not stop it of their own accord, then some action should be taken. A fire chief in one southern city, having trouble with the same problem, has threatened to turn the hose on those loitering around the scene of a fire, and hindering the firemen in getting to the blaze. Sounds like he has something there.

WASHINGTON PARADE

By GLADSTONE WILLIAMS.

WORLD'S LARGEST OFFICE BUILDING WASHINGTON, July 27. Future visitors to the national capital, remembering the site of the old Washington airport on the Virginia side of the Potomac river, will be amazed a year hence to see there instead a colossal new structure, exceeding all past conceptions of the world's largest government office building.

The giant new building or series of buildings, sprawling over 67 acres of ground, is designed to house 40,000 employees of the War Department, now spread out in some 17 different buildings in the city of Washington, with a grand total of 5,100,000 square feet of floor space; it will be the largest office structure in the world, governmental or otherwise.

By comparison the 102-story Empire State building in New York has only 2,158,000 square feet of rental floor space, and the huge merchandising mart in Chicago, the world's present largest structure, will have a fifth less floor space.

A further picture of its size may be obtained in the reminder that the ground covered by the new building will be equivalent to about 56 average city blocks. It will house almost twice the number of workers now located in the great triangle of federal buildings strung along Pennsylvania and Constitution avenues for many blocks.

President Roosevelt and Secretary of War Stimson have approved construction of the new Army headquarters and the House Appropriations Committee has just included in the latest supplemental supply bill a fund of $5,000,000 for the project.

GOVERNMENTAL NEEDS Administration recommendations for the structure's erection rather epitomizes the government building situation in Washington since the nation's $40,000,000 national defense program got actively under way. The shortage in office space to house the army of government workers congregated in Washington has become so acute that practically every available building has been utilized. Not only office buildings, but apartment houses and private homes have been taken over by the government to meet the growing needs for additional office space. In one case even an old livery stable has been found serviceable.

To relieve the congestion, proposals are pending for transferring a half dozen government agencies or bureaus to some other city. A special committee of congress, the Lanham house committee, has been set up to investigate space conditions here. Suggestions are being considered for transferring the ICC and the Federal Trade Commission to Chicago, the Bituminous Coal Commission to Pittsburgh and the Home Owners' Loan Corporation to New York City.

Other questions are being raised as to why the "22 acres of masonry" embraced in the Department of Agriculture should continue to be located in Washington. Some other city more central to the nation's agricultural section would be better for the department's headquarters, it is being urged. Agitation for general decentralization is in the air.

But there is a genuine office space shortage in Washington that is becoming a problem of growing concern to officials. It is reflected also in hotel accommodations and residential housing to accommodate government workers and visitors alike. Washington has become the boom town of America.

GIGANTIC NEW WAR DEPARTMENT The gigantic new War Department building, therefore, is proposed as a sort of symbol of what is going on in Washington and the position Washington has come to occupy as the focal point in world affairs.

Unlike most other government structures that adorn the mall, it will not be of the monumental type of architecture, hence not the costliest though the largest in the world. It will be only three stories in height, so as not to obscure the view of Arlington National Cemetery, which lies just beyond the site selected.

The building, of light reinforced concrete construction with brick facades, will be strictly utilitarian in character and will be devoid of facilities except those relating directly to business functions of the War Department. Escalators will take the place of elevators.

Plans call for its completion a year after it is begun, and the first 500,000 square feet of space will be available for use within six months.

The extensive Department of Commerce Building, costing $17,500,000 and almost twice as long as the Washington Monument is tall, was once called "Hoover's folly" by skeptics who believed it would prove a waste of money and office space. No less than all the other department structures built since then, it is now overtaxed, despite its 1,092,000 square feet of space.

War developments and the demands of our defense program have caused Washington officials to regret that there were not more "Hoover's follies."

SILHOUETTES

By RALPH T. JONES.

Sittin' Up And Takin' Notice.

This is written at home, instead of the office. I do hope a couple of you have observed that "Silhouettes" has been missing from this space for a few days. It would be thoroughly disheartening to feel that no one had missed me.

Today, Saturday, I'm sitting up, bathrobe clad, and pecking this out on the old portable typewriter, using a card table for desk. After the greater part of a week during which physical condition has been, roughly speaking, lousy. No need to go into symptoms and what the doctor said and all that. Suffice it to say, hope to be back on the full job, feeling well, by Monday morning.

Quadruplets, No Less.

Heard good story.

Seems the household cat of a certain home not far away gave birth to four blessed events. And the young daughter of the house wanted to tell an uncle and aunt who lived in a distant city of the advent of the four kittens.

So she bought an announcement card at the ten-cent store. Wrote on it the names of her parents, "Mr. and Mrs. So-and-so wish to announce the birth of Mary, Jimmy, Matilda and Jane. All doing well."

Of course, the uncle and aunt, receiving that card, could interpret it only as announcement of the birth of four human quadruplets. They talked, excitedly, about it to friends and neighbors. Word reached the newspaper office in that distant city. That newspaper asked the paper in this city where the little girl and the kittens lived. Reporters and photographers rushed out for stories and pictures of the quads. And when explanations were duly made, were shown the kittens.

Useless Creatures.

This week at home has convinced me that a man is the most useless of creatures, left all day in the house full of women. He is the true fish out of water, in his own home at midmorning. There are busy women everywhere.

In one room one is vacuuming the rug. Another is sweeping the front porch. Bedroom is occupied by a daughter fixing her complexion. Back porch, someone is washing baby things.

In another bedroom is the youngest granddaughter—three weeks old—sleeping and enforcing, thereby, hushed whispers and tip-toe movement.

The other granddaughter—two years old—has pre-empted the side garden with her nurse and playthings. And so on.

Even the radio is useless for intelligent entertainment. One soap opera after another, all about problems that could interest no more than the mental range of morons. The other afternoon it was left on for an hour and a half and I heard five—count 'em, five—installments of continuing stories, not one of which contained an iota of interest.

It is hard to believe, but I am almost convinced I've at last found, in these daytime soap stories, radio programs in which the commercial is the most interesting part.

The Sound Of Planes.

Over our home there are frequent passings of airplanes. I know it is on the direct route to the north, and we are accustomed to the regularly scheduled passenger planes going over. But there has been a great increase in air travel over our neighborhood of late. Maybe from the training field at Camp Gordon. Or maybe just the normal result of the increasing air activity in the defense program.

But our two-year-old no longer looks up from her play, she is so accustomed to the planes.

And I can't help recalling how I saw my first automobile when I was about 12 years old and how the high-wheel velocipede bicycle only went out about the time of my own arrival on this earth.

I don't feel fearfully old. In fact, I'm not. Had a birthday just recently and know my age, exactly. But it does seem to me that, measured in man's progress, the years that I have lived have witnessed the greatest changes in the way of human life in all history.

How many "firsts" I've seen. First auto. First motion picture. First radio. First airplane. And so on. Life has been interesting, at least, for those of my generation.

Word Stories

By W. Worthington Wells

Enormous (adjective) is used to describe a thing of extraordinary size or dimensions; excessive in weight. It is permissible to use enormous to describe the degree of a crime as an enormous criminal, or an enormous atrocity.

Enormity (noun) is erroneously used when employed to describe the state of being vast; immensity, etc. Enormity has nothing to do with size. It is best used in sentences such as: The enormity of his crimes made removal from office mandatory. The use of enormity in the foregoing sentences is considered better form than the use of enormous. Enormity is most frequently used when relating to the quality of being bad; outrageous; wicked; etc.

Enormousness (noun) is the word to use when you are referring to the excessive size of a thing, as: The enormousness of the Queen Mary is emphasized when she is juxtaposed to the ocean greyhounds of 20 years ago. The people who have driven a car across the United States can appreciate the enormousness of the Pacific Ocean when its area is compared to that of our country.

FAIR ENOUGH

By WESTBROOK PEGLER

Clearing Things Up NEW YORK, July 27.—I think it would clarify matters for all of us on both sides and in the middle to recognize that Senator Burt Wheeler, of Montana, hates President Roosevelt with an overwhelming passion and that a man in his frame of mind, which he has not merely expressed by indirection but openly admitted, is incapable of sober reasoning on the President's course in war or toward it. The senator, who said that Henry L. Stimson, the secretary of war, was ga-ga with age, is himself no less ga-ga and I should say considerably more so with hatred and would be fighting just as wildly on some other issue if the war did not provide a dramatic and dangerous controversy. Wheeler doesn't merely disagree with the President or despise or detest him. He hates Mr. Roosevelt, personally, and will never let himself be found dead, much less alive, on the President's side of any issue, whatever the consequence of his opposition to the people of the United States.

How can anyone presume to say how Wheeler feels toward the President? You talk to him 10 or 15 minutes some time and you will know. He will not hold out on you.

Classic Hatred His is one of the classic hatreds of history and admitting that a man as Wheeler is found dead, other American have good reason not to indorse Mr. Roosevelt's government, his politics or his personality, you have to realize that Wheeler's mental condition is far more heated than that of a man who is merely sulky, sore or righteous and indignant.

He rages and damns and spatters and splatters spittle and sweat at the merest mention of the President or his policies, and his campaign to wreck the morale of the Army, Navy and Marines and discredit the professional judgment of the best soldiers we have in a time of undeclared but very practical war brought to us by the greatest military power in the world's history is a campaign against the man he hates.

To serve that hatred Wheeler might sabotage the safety and future independence of the United States and turn the Army into an undisciplined rabble of confused and rebellious armed gangs like those which brawled through Germany. He might bring down in a bloody wreck the whole edifice of the American government which, inhabited though it might be by nasty opportunists from the pulchritudinous of Union Sq. and lazy campus petulant of the Ivy League, is, nevertheless, in line and structure, the same beautiful form of popular rule that it ever was. He might invite the Germans and Japanese right up to the territorial waters of the United States, but he will discredit and vanquish, if he can, the man he hates as heartily as most men love their country.

Possibly Wheeler does possess a legal right to spread disaffection in the military forces and if he does he will expound, explain and defend that right with the slippery adroitness of a Muscovite shyster on the Labor Relations Board. He is tough, cunning and the President's own equal in caustic debate and the hell of it is that he is appealing to the strongest self-interest of all the people with plausible arguments which favor only Hitler and harm only the United States.

Unwise Acts So though Wheeler carries on, as no doubt he will, and provokes local councils to unwise acts of patriotic exasperation, such as the denial of his right to speak in public, the fact to be remembered is that he is not fighting for every fourth American boy, as he pretends, but against the man he hates.

If Wheeler has his way he will plow under many more Americans than might be lost fighting Hitler, for his program leads toward revolution and civil war, with an unreliable and half-trained Army of malcontents turned loose on their own people under upstart leaders and the inevitable invasion and "protection" of an utterly disorganized country by Adolf Hitler.

Wheeler, Lindbergh and the rest of their company set their own judgment on military matters above that of every professional soldier of recognized standing who has expressed an opinion on the position of the United States in this war.

But Wheeler doesn't trouble himself with military arguments. Like the President, when he undertakes to pack the courts or humiliate his legitimate enemies by dirty innuendoes released as gossip, Wheeler is fighting free-style to lick the man he hates, though the United States be licked as well by a foreign foe in consequence.

The people will be able to judge this conflict better who hear in mind that one man's hatred of another is at the bottom of the great campaign of 1941 to prevent the American nation from arming against enemies advancing from both sides of the world.

Bells Shake Country. When a parish priest in Buenos Aires ordered the bells of his church to ring in honor of a Fascist demonstration on Labor Day he probably did not expect to shake the country. Now citizens are being asked in the national congress. The demonstrators were passing the church of San Nicolas de Bari when the bells rang a peal, which apparently was expected by the organizers of the parade, although it caused surprise among the spectators. The radical deputy, Dr. J. W. Perkins, has asked the lower chamber to interpellate the minister of foreign affairs and find out whether the clergyman was acting on superior orders.

ONE WORD MORE

By RALPH MCGILL.

JOURNEY BACK HOME Following is the text of a letter from a friend in England who has just returned with her husband to London after almost a year in this country spent recuperating from an illness. It is presented as a compelling document from an Englishwoman returning to her home from peace to war and her analysis of what she found:

London,
10th July, 1941.

My Dear Mr. McGill:

This letter is to tell you of my trip to and arrival in London. We left New York later than we expected at 4 in the afternoon and arrived in Bermuda in the evening. As you may have read in the papers, Gracie Fields was in the plane, and there were many other interesting people, but I do not think that they would like to be mentioned. I was very sorry that I could not show Bermuda to Fred, nor see any of my friends there, for we stayed only two evening hours at the airport. I shall never forget the lovely time of rest and leisure I spent in Bermuda while recovering. A parcel of onions was left for me at the port to take back to England, and my mother-in-law was delighted when I gave it to her.

The Pan-American clippers are really too comfortable. When meals are being served as in a hotel and been prepared as in a Pullman car, you are apt to forget that you are crossing the Atlantic, and this diminishes the thrill of the flight for people who, like myself, are always eager for new sensations. However, it is a great feat of the human mind, and I only wished that our moral achievements had kept pace with our technical ones.

The hours absolutely tumbled into each other, and we had lunch about 6 in the evening, dinner at 2 at night and breakfast at 11 the next morning—anyway according to my watch showing New York time.

It was some time in the late afternoon that we landed in Horta, Azores, where we stayed a few hours, as they did not like to continue the journey at once. I went for a long walk with a very interesting passenger, but I did not think that the Azores are half as beautiful as Bermuda. Another night in our flying beds and at dawn next morning we arrived in Lisbon. As it was 5 a. m., the gentleman and his car were at the port to welcome us. He drove us to Estoril, a beautiful seaside place with lovely flowers. We spent only three days there, thanks to having priority on the plane to England, and contrary to most people who have to wait for weeks and months before they can continue their journey. As you would expect of me, I did quite a bit of sight-seeing in Lisbon, but works of art there are only second rate. The atmosphere of the town and the temperament of the people reminded me much more of southern Italy than of the neighboring Spain. At the moment Lisbon is a queer place, one of peace and plenty in a continent of war and hunger. Even to us, coming from America, the abundance of food served at each meal, seemed enormous. How it must strike people coming from Spain or France, I cannot imagine.

OUT FROM LISBON In the evening at about 9 o'clock we left for England. This time our plane was much smaller and carried a larger number of passengers, but for wartime travelling the seats were comfortable enough to spend one night in. As if specially to suit my hobby of an early morning walk, our plane landed somewhere in Great Britain, and while it refueled, we had our first English breakfast. Another short flight and a train journey of a few hours, and we arrived in London. My friend Lissy had gone to the house the day before and had decorated it all with flowers. But this time it was not the usual home-coming, and I am sure you would all like to know what impression London made on me after an absence of nearly 10 months, in which so much had happened.

To say it in one sentence: I was more struck by all that is still there than by all that has gone. The first drive from Waterloo Station to Hampstead and a stroll round Piccadilly really impressed me more by the lack of traffic than by sights of destruction. Fred's new office is very beautiful and tastefully furnished. In his car, driven by a splendid young chauffeur who had shown her pluck in many an air raid, he took me to the city. There I saw how badly some parts of London have been hit. St. Paul's still stands in all its beauty in spite of some damage. I only hope that the future architects of London will not rebuild the houses which used to surround the cathedral, but will leave the open space which now does real justice to its grandeur. Nothing is left of the streets around Fred's former office. The church at the end of the street shows as noble ruins as I have seen on any of my wanderings. When I visited my bank at the new office they had a photo of the debris of their old one on the wall, and they showed it to me with about the same gesture with which a duke would show the picture of his ruined ancestral castle.

When Fred came back last autumn he wrote to you about the wonderful morale of the English people, about their grim sense of humor, their lack of hatred, and their firm determination to resist. He has painted a very true picture; but I have also seen another one. There are sad tales of beloved ones who are dead, or still worse, mutilated. There is a rather strained look on many faces. There are children who, while having enough to eat, do not have the right variety of food. There are daily worries of how to meet rising cost with reduced earnings. Food rationing functions wonderfully, everybody gets what is due to him. As to the clothes rationing, nothing can yet be seen of smart people wearing patched suits. English women are much less hard hit by rationing than would be the case with American women, as anyway they always went in more for quality than for quantity and style. I have been to a literary luncheon at the Grosvenor and have met there the usual elegant crowd. But the presents of stockings which I brought to some friends, have been very much appreciated.

STRUCTURE OF SOCIETY Of the thousand and one little things that make up life's varied pattern, many have changed. But just as I said before with regard to the buildings, I must now say regarding the structure of society. Much more has remained than has gone! The porter still deferentially opens your luggage, the policeman still beams at you patronisingly when he answers your question, and when I came home, my housemaid was as impersonal as ever, and the table was set with gleaming silver just as all the years past. It seemed so strange to me that my slippers were still at the same place and that, except for a few cracks in the walls and a repaired glass roof, Templewood avenue looked just as I had left it. Fred had an air raid shelter built, but has never used it. Nobody knows, of course, when we may need it in the future; nights have been very quiet lately, but naturally I don't know whether this lull will continue.

I have offered my services as an air raid warden, and I am going to spend the next few days eagerly looking for work elsewhere as formerly with the Refugee Committee or anywhere else where I can find scope to do my bit. I cannot tell you how pleased I am to have come back. Already in the first few days many have come to me whom I could help or give a treat, and it is lovely that everybody in Fred's office and all my friends say to me: "We are pleased that you are back, and we expected you to return as soon as you were well again."

Everybody asks about my experiences in America, and I tell them how infinitely kind you have all been to me. Really, it was worthwhile being seriously ill and strangely short of cash, to find out how wonderful all my friends would be to me. So I'll join you in the nice song: "God Bless America and the Americans!" HILDA.

(So ends the letter. To me, the best line was the one, regarding the structure of society. "Much more remains than is gone.")

Atlantans Become Familiar With Garbage Aroma.

Surely, by the time this gets into print, Atlanta's least aesthetic problem will have been settled—let us hope.

I speak of garbage—or, as we called it in my boyhood—slops. To the average citizen garbage meant just about as much as an increased bacteria count in Abyssinian wofus feathers. It may have given his wife annoyance on days when the maid didn't come and she had to carry it out to the galvanized receptacle. But it wasn't a part of his daily life. He had a lot more trouble getting rid of surplus coathangers and razor blades which had outlived their usefulness.

But last week he became garbage-conscious. Which probably was good for him, because a man, if he desires to be well informed, should learn something new every day.

He did. He became garbage-conscious whether he liked it or not. He could turn up his nose at it but unless he had brought home from the beach a couple of ear plugs to insert in his nostrils the altitudinal angle of his nose made slight difference.

The earnest investigator of the garbage problem was not forced to penetrate the perilous fastnesses of the back alleys. He could gather material in Ansley Park or the Atlanta portion of Druid Hills. And if he strolled or hurried—fired his bus stop to his office, as I do, passing a block of grocery stores on his way, he had information thrust upon him. I am sticking to the past tense—hoping the garbage men's strike has been amicably adjusted.

It is especially unfortunate that this uprising against the status quo occurred in midsummer. Watermelon time. Tomato time. Cantaloupe time. And a hot time. I yield to no Georgian in my admiration of melons and other fresh vegetables. When they are fresh.

Hoping Against Hope.

It was a hot forenoon when I investigated the garbage situation in my stride. On my way to work.

The best the grocers—they'd call them greengrocers, I think, in England—could do was to gather up all the empty boxes and baskets and pasteboard cartons they could find and fill them with defunct tomatoes and celery and cantaloupes and cabbage. And place them on the curb, in supreme confidence that Providence and Mayor LeCraw would come along and gather them up.

The banana peel has long been the synonym for slipperiness. They've even been using them, instead of grease, for lubricating the wooden paths down which ships are launched.

But I'll suggest that a dozen over-ripe tomatoes which have spread across the sidewalk make banana peels feel like sandpaper. I have read of the underprivileged who poke about garbage cans in hopes of a crust of bread. I observed none on Garbage Row, as I have officially christened my favorite block of provisioners to the public. They could find tomatoes and scallions and et cetera and melons, as the grand old ballad used to explain, but they found no bananas—or breadcrusts—today. Or, if there were any breadcrusts they were buried too deep to seek without a gas mask.

The household garbage problem, happily, is not mine. We live in the country and pay a man—who owns a beautiful home on Peachtree road—for collection service. His men have not struck, so far. And I trust this doesn't put any ideas in their heads.

With all the world in turmoil and the Japanese sticking up their ugly heads and the Russians not doing so well and the industrial defense problem causing more and more trouble we shouldn't pause to think about garbage, perhaps. But the shortage of chrome and machine tools isn't thrust under our noses.

Dahlonge's Snooper.
Just an item or two from Brother Townsend's Dahlonge Nugget, the Watchdog of Lumpkin:

"One night last week, about 8 o'clock, while Marshal Joe Woodward was making a short round, as he crossed over into a certain street he heard somebody laughing and slapping their hands together like the good old church members used to do at camp meeting when they were laughing the holy laugh, caused the marshal to slip on up to where he found three parties full of corn juice. The fellow was tickled at a church member who was feeling so good from the effects of the juice he undertook to jump a ditch full of water and fell in, getting muddy from head to foot. The marshal told them to get out and go with him, and happened to look around and there sat one of our lawyers with his head hung down, his eyes half shut and a broad smile on, perfectly quiet, who had taken on an overdose and thought he wouldn't be noticed, but the marshal discovered him and with help, carried all three to the calaboose where they could get a good night's rest and be ready to meet Mayor Bush next day."

"When hearing a disturbance at a late hour in the night it's best to ask a man about it, as it might be something embarrassing for a lady to explain."

"If reports about the conduct of a certain man are true, then we don't believe he is recognized by a higher power and should not deceive the people."

Nazi Blockade Runner.
Erlangen, Said Caught
LONDON, July 27.—(AP)—The Admiralty reported today that the German ship Erlangen which was attempting to run the blockade has been intercepted by our patrols in the south Atlantic ocean."

The Erlangen, 6,101-ton freighter which traded before the war between ports in the United States, Australia and Germany, slipped out of a Chilean port last May 18 in an attempt to run the British blockade with a cargo of coal and grain. Where she has been since then has not been known.

She reached Chilean waters in the early months of the war, slipping through from Australia and burning her furniture and woodwork as fuel when her coal was gone.

Two Nazi Troop Trains Destroyed, London Says
LONDON, July 27.—(AP)—Reuters, British news agency, reported today from Moscow that two German troop trains moving through Sweden on their way to Finland were blown up.

Reuters said German authorities had protested to Sweden, asking that "effective protective measures" be taken. Sweden gave Germany permission to move a division through her territory at the start of the Russian campaign.

Japanese Promise To Continue Payments
NEW YORK, July 27.—(AP)—T. Nishiyama, Japanese financial commissioner in New York, asserted today Japan would continue to make service payments on Japanese bonds and fulfill contractual obligations as far as possible despite the order freezing Japanese assets in this country.

He added, however, that if the order resulted in complete disruption of trade between the two nations, Japanese payments would become more difficult.

Chungking, Chinese Reds Now Said in Agreement
TIENTSIN, China, July 27.—(AP)—The newspaper Yungpan, frequently considered a mouthpiece of the Japanese Army in North China, reported today that Chungking and Chinese Communists had reached a compromise agreement ending their long friction.

According to Yungpan, the Reds agreed to support the Chiang Kai-shek regime to the end against Japan, to place themselves under Chungking supervision and to disband the Fourth Route Army. Chungking, in return, agreed to subsidize the Reds by more than 2,000,000 Chinese dollars monthly and slightly extend the territory under Communist control, the newspaper said.

CHUNGKING RAIDED AGAIN.
CHUNGKING, China, July 27.—(AP)—This capital of the Central Chinese government was under air raid alarm for five hours and 15 minutes today as more than 100 Japanese planes swarmed over Szechwan province, bombing Chengtu and other points.

Vichy Seeks Trio In Dormoy Death

VICHY, Unoccupied France, July 27.—(AP)—Police heeded the old "cherchez la femme" adage today in seeking to solve the strange assassination of Marx Dormoy, one-time popular front leader, who was killed Saturday morning by a bomb planted under his mattress.

A mysterious woman was understood to have been seen on Friday visiting two men who occupied a room across the hall from Dormoy in the modest roadside inn near Montelimar where he was forced by the French government to reside.

These three were sought for quizzing in the death of the gray-bearded politician who was interior minister under the Socialist Premier Leon Blum and who was called "a man with a thousand enemies."

The Paris press announced the arrest, on Vice Premier Jean Darnaud's orders, of two former leaders of the Cagoulard (hooded) organization, but they were believed to have been taken into custody prior to Dormoy's death. As interior minister Dormoy had helped break up the secret group.

Acheson's Announce Daughter's Engagement
WASHINGTON, July 27.—(AP)—Assistant Secretary of State Dan Acheson and Mrs. Acheson announced today the engagement of their daughter, Jane Stanley Acheson, to Dudley Bradstreet Williams, son of Dudley Bradstreet Williams, N. Y.

Brown is vice president of Columbia Aircraft Corporation, Port Washington, Long Island. The announcement was made at a luncheon at the Acheson summer home in Sandy Spring, Md.

Good Morning Defense Bonds To Be Sold in 5 Points Booth

By LOUIE D. NEWTON, BUILDING MEN.

The Sid Reams came by and picked Mrs. Newton and me up last Wednesday afternoon for a delightful trip down to Camp Rutledge. It was my first visit to this well-known camp. They have '96 boys there, with a capable staff of leaders, composed of the members of the Atlanta public school faculties. The camp is jointly operated by the Optimist Club of Atlanta and the school department.

The camp belongs to the government, having been developed by the CCC some years ago. It consists of some 6,000 acres of typical middle Georgia woodland, with several streams, a very fine lake, all sorts of athletic fields, and so forth. Pine trees and various hardwood trees make a beautiful setting for the camp. The cabins are scattered over a wide area, with splendid equipment. The large buildings, such as the kitchen and dining room, the woodcraft building, the Indian village, the warehouse and hospital, are spacious and attractive. The roads leading about the reservation were built by the CCC and are in excellent condition. And I may add that we had a very heavy rainstorm just as we were arriving, which gave a real test to the roads.

Mr. McCord and his staff of counselors know how to run a camp for boys. The boys agree to that statement, which is the final decision. It was a pleasure, indeed, to observe the spirit of the camp. Full of pep, as normal boys should be, they were, nevertheless, as orderly as any group I have ever seen.

Some of the boys pay their expenses while others are the guests of the Optimist Club. But a visitor would never know the difference. They are all down there for a real outing, and they share and share alike in all the privileges of the camp. They were in the pink of physical condition—ready for the bounteous and delicious supper. The food was exceptionally well cooked, which Mr. Reams explained is one of the features of the camp.

Various members of the Optimist Club and members of the school board made short talks. But the highlight of the evening's entertainment was the program given by the boys themselves. They outsang any camp group I have ever heard. And when they got to "God Bless America," they really opened up.

We saw their wood work, their zoological and botanical museum, the Indian chief and many other interesting features of their achievement. The storm had upset the lights so that they couldn't put on their water sports, as they had planned, but otherwise we had a wonderful evening. This camp, along with so many others throughout our land, is building men—men who will be strong in body, mind and spirit for the tasks of the long tomorrow.

Chungking, Chinese Reds Now Said in Agreement
TIENTSIN, China, July 27.—(AP)—The newspaper Yungpan, frequently considered a mouthpiece of the Japanese Army in North China, reported today that Chungking and Chinese Communists had reached a compromise agreement ending their long friction.

According to Yungpan, the Reds agreed to support the Chiang Kai-shek regime to the end against Japan, to place themselves under Chungking supervision and to disband the Fourth Route Army. Chungking, in return, agreed to subsidize the Reds by more than 2,000,000 Chinese dollars monthly and slightly extend the territory under Communist control, the newspaper said.

CHUNGKING RAIDED AGAIN.
CHUNGKING, China, July 27.—(AP)—This capital of the Central Chinese government was under air raid alarm for five hours and 15 minutes today as more than 100 Japanese planes swarmed over Szechwan province, bombing Chengtu and other points.

New Requests For Increases In Wages Seen

Salary Program To Be Presented to City Council Today.

An additional $48,000 will be added to city salary accounts for the remainder of the year under terms of settlement of a labor dispute Saturday, through which city garbage collections were resumed after a four-day strike, but there was every prospect that many others requests will find their way to council at its special session this afternoon.

Mayor LeCraw emphasized the agreement through which garbage collections were resumed did not let the bars down for wholesale increases, and said he is pledged only to approve those affecting the sanitary department, which, he added, received his approval solely for the purpose of protecting the health of citizens.

Under the agreement of city officials, 295 Negro employees in the sanitary, construction and water departments will get pay increases, but LeCraw has said he will sign raises for 97 employees in the construction and water departments.

The raises which will be recommended to council average slightly more than $300 a year per person.

Councilman White said he will recommend council make all salary adjustments in January of each year; establish minimums and maximums for all city positions for which salaries are classified; that no report of the city personnel board shall be overridden by less than a two-thirds vote of council.

He also said he will offer recommendations for aggregate salary increases amounting to about $300,000 for next year divided as follows:

That 240 white employees making $100 per month or less be given a $45 increase each for the year amounting to $10,800; that 443 white employees making more than $100 per month but less than $125 be given a $50 increase each per year, amounting to $13,200; that 218 white employees making from $126 to $150 per month be given $20 annual increases each, amounting to $4,360, and that 95 white employees making from $151 to $175 per month be given a $12 annual increase each amounting to $11,520.

If the White proposals are approved, the city pay roll will be hiked about $155,000 for 1942. This figure includes the raises already allowed for July, those which will be recommended tomorrow and the White list.

College of Pharmacy Considers Expansion

Plans for the accommodation of an increased number of students at the Southern College of Pharmacy were discussed after election of officers for the 1941-42 term, it was announced yesterday.

The trustees were told that registration of new students already exceeded the number enrolled last year, and additional instructors will be needed. J. L. Hawk was elected chairman of the board, J. T. Selman, vice chairman, and Mack D. Hodges, secretary and treasurer.

Burge Hits 31st, 32d as Crackers Kick Smokies Pair, 20-7, 11-8

BY JACK TROY

Few Players Drafted

Up to this point baseball generally has not been affected by international affairs. In the major leagues only two players—Hank Greenberg and Hugh Mulcahy—are in Uncle Samuel's new Army.

The majority of minor league players who have left the game have done so to accept better paying national defense jobs. Very few, indeed, have been drafted.

This is not what had been generally expected, and, of course, many ball players would be in training now except for the passage of bills allowing for deferment. Before the end of summer a vast army of ball players may take up arms, and there is no way of knowing what next baseball season will bring.

As in the last war, the older player may come into his own again.

Scouts are reluctant to buy outstanding young prospects, fearing they'll be lost to the service.

In the case of players who have been deferred and placed in a limited military service category, however, it's not easy to understand why scouts hold off.

There's Lester Burge. He is the brightest slugging prospect the Southern League has had in many a year. And yet the scouts talk him down.

This would be partly understandable if all he could do is hit. But he's probably the most improved Southern League player in the field.

I leave this puzzle with you.

Scotch Logic

That was quite an argument the Scotchman put up to his wife over the matter of buying a new fur coat.

He had gone to Canada many years before and had picked up a sealskin coat at a bargain. As the years passed, the Missus dropped hints here and there as to its age and made it a point to stop more and more before window fronts displaying made-up pelts.

The Scotchman never had anything to say until the little woman, reaching the point of exasperation, said she was ashamed to be seen in public wearing the same coat year after year.

"Well, now, I can verra well understand how ye feel," he said, "but don't ye forget that the seal wore that same coat for many more years than ye've been wearing it, and I daresay he'd be proud to be wearing it today."

Social Error

And there was the pet canary, a sort of whitish yellow bird, that got out of its cage one day and left its mate to explore the neighborhood.

It was Bill Keefe, of the Times Picayune, who picked up the story.

The canary returned after an absence of several days with most of its feathers gone and with bruises all over.

With deep concern its mate asked what had happened, and the canary replied, "Well, I was flying low over a net several doors up the street and I got mixed up in the doggondest badminton match you ever saw!"

"Eternal Busher"

Writing in the Saturday Evening Post, Ted Shane calls old Clarence Waldo Blethen, the "minor league Mathewson," and goes on, in entertaining fashion, to relate the "saga of an eternal busher"—the career of Climax Blethen, for many years a minor league pitcher, who this season, at the age of 48, still is active in the game, managing, pitching and playing third base for a semi-pro team at Frederick, Md.

Good old Climax. Cracker fans never will forget him. He pitched for the Crackers from 1928 to the spring of 1933. In 1938 he was one of the main reasons why Savannah won a pennant. That was the last year of organized ball for Climax. He was 46 then.

The story the fans like best to remember about Climax concerns the time he absentmindedly put his store teeth in the hip pocket of his uniform and, in sliding into second, bit himself!

Except for a brief trial with Brooklyn while he was still a Cracker, Blethen never made the big time.

Whirlaway Got Excellent Ride In Losing Race

Shelhamer Bitterly Disappointed; Next Race Set August 23.

By TOM SILER.

CHICAGO, July 27.—(AP)—The big moment in young Alfred Shelhamer's riding career has come and gone.

This 23-year-old jockey was aboard the supposed invincible Whirlaway Saturday. Thousands moaned and groaned as the Kentucky Derby-Preakness-Belmont winner fell before the challenge of unheralded Attention in the $60,000 Arlington Classic. But none was as disillusioned or disappointed as the rider of the speedy Warren Wright colt.

Shelhamer got his first real taste of racing fame when he was named to ride Whirlaway in the absence of Eddie Arcaro, who had been aboard in the horse's major victories. It was his big chance, his opportunity to hit the jackpot and to show that Whirlaway could win without Arcaro.

DENIED GLORY.

But fate denied Shelhamer of glory. It took the champion to prove once again that a "sure thing" in racing is only a jest.

The race virtually proved, however, that the Arlington Classic is a breaker of champions. In using this event, the great Whirlaway joined Gallahadien, Johnstown, Bimelech, Twenty Grand and other horses which made auspicious early-season records in previous years but met a common fate in the Classic.

Competent observers agreed Shelhamer gave the speed king an excellent ride. Whirlaway got away last but moved up easily in the back stretch and pulled up almost even with Attention on the turn. Our Boots, early pacesetter, then faded badly and it became strictly a two-horse race as the field hit the stretch. Then to the amazement of all, Attention matched Whirlaway's sprint and was pulling away slightly as they reached the wire.

BELOW PAR.

"I am sorry, after he (Warren Wright) had placed so much confidence in me by giving me my chance, that I could not win," said Shelhamer afterwards. "But I feel that it was not my fault. He just did not run like he has, although he behaved perfectly."

The victory marked a return to form for Attention, whose triumph enriched Mrs. Parker Corning of Albany, N. Y., by $42,450. The son of Equipoise-Fizzaz was an outstanding two-year-old, but injured a hip at the New England Futurity. The injury failed to heal in time to permit competition in the Derby, Preakness and other early fixtures.

Trainer Max Hirsch said there was never any doubt in his mind that Attention was as fast as Whirlaway or any other three-year-old.

The two will get another chance to match their speed August 23 in the $65,000 American Derby at Washington Park. Both are eligible and their trainers have indicated they will be ready for the challenge.

Atlantan Wins Daytona Race; Flock Injured

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla., July 27.—(AP)—B. C. Long, of Atlanta, Ga., won the annual midsummer car race on Daytona Beach's road-beach course today in the comparatively slow time of two hours, 13 minutes.

His speed was 75.10 miles an hour compared with the record of 76.15 for the course of 166 miles. Roughness of the beach section of the course slowed the speed of contestants.

Bill Snowden, of St. Augustine, Fla., who led until the 47th lap when a flat tire cost him his front position, was second and Joe Littlejohn, of Spartanburg, S. C., was third.

Others of the first 10 in the order of their finish were: Lloyd Seay, Atlanta; Lloyd Moody, Daytona Beach; Hugh Lanford, Spartanburg, S. C.; Jim Poppell, Hastings, Fla.; Roy Hall, Atlanta; Bob Flock, Atlanta; Sy Clark, Miami.

Pontello Flock, of Atlanta, was seriously injured when he lost control of his car on the road section of the course. Several other spills occurred but the drivers were not seriously hurt.

Apprentice Wins 61 Races in 51 Days

LOS ANGELES, July 27.—(AP)—Ferry Zufelt, 18-year-old apprentice, not only finished the Hollywood Park season as the leading jockey, but surpassed the track victory record as well.

The Sidgeur (Hah) led booted home three winners in the final program yesterday, giving him 61 victories for the 51-day meeting. The former record of 53 wins was set by Charley Corbett in 1939.

cession only to see Miss Bernhard surge back and sweep six in a row, lose the twelfth, and then take the next two for the set.

National singles champion Jon McNeill, of Oklahoma City, and Frankie Parker, of Altadena, Cal., the national clay court king, won the men's doubles title for the second time in three years. They defeated Gardner Mulloy, of Coral Gables, Fla., and Wayne Sabin, of Reno, Nev., with terrific volleys—9-7, 6-4, 3-6, 6-1.

Horton Smith Takes St. Paul Golf Tourney

Joplin Ghost's Magical Putter Gives Him Final Round 63.

By EARL HILLIGAN.

ST. PAUL, Minn., July 27.—(AP) Golf's "Joplin Ghost" of other years—Lester Horton Smith—rode to the St. Paul Open golf championship on a magical putter today.

The 33-year-old native Missourian, now registering out of Pinchurst, N. C., demonstrated why he is recognized as one of the greater greens players of all time by scoring a final round 63—nine under par—for a 72-hole total of 276 shots which literally snatched first money of $1,600 in a torrid stretch drive.

Smith has been a consistent money winner down through the years, starting on Ryder Cup teams and taking his share of fairway crowns. But his smashing fourth round today was reminiscent of his 1929-1930 play, when he blazed his way to 12 championships and some $30,000 winnings to become known as the "Joplin Ghost."

There was something almost ghostlike about his putting today. He had 10 one-putts, he had eight birdies on putts ranging up to 35 feet. He had only one bogie and he finished with a great eagle three at the 18th, running down a 12-foot putt as though the ball had a string tied to it.

That final putt was the "pay-off." Big Ralph Guldahl, roaring down the stretch an hour or so later, could get only a birdie at the 18th—and finished second at 277 on a pair of 69's as against Smith's morning round 70 and his great 63. The victor had opening rounds of 69 and 74 as against Guldahl's first rounds of 68-71. Smith's 63 tied the tourney record of a single round.

Jimmy Thomson, of Chicopee, Mass., one of the game's longest hitters, put together rounds of 68 and 71 today to finish third at 279, with Ben Hogan, of Hershey, Pa., leading money winner of the year, landing in the 80 bracket to make it the 52nd straight tourney in which he has placed in the money.

A remarkable record, Hogan, with final rounds of 71 and 69, was tied by Johnny Bulla, of Chicago, who had 70 and 72 today, and Joe Coria, of St. Paul, the young pro who set the pace through 54 holes only to falter today with a final round 74, two over regulation figures.

Clayton Heafner, of Lincoln, N. C., firing a 63 this morning and a 71 in the afternoon, landed at 281, the same figure registered by Byron Nelson, former National Open and P. G. A. titlewinner, who had final rounds of 70-68.

Low amateur honors went to George Dawson, of Chicago, who had a 283 aggregate, five under Keller course's par.

Saratoga Starts 77th Turf Season

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y., July 27.—(AP)—The nation's oldest racetrack opens its 77th season tomorrow with a pair of fine old stakes, more horses than it can stable and the emphasis still on the sporting aspects of the meeting.

With America's many tracks engaged in a brisk battle for the available class horses, the position of the Saratoga Racing Association is enviable. Attracted by 27 of the most famous stake races in the nation, more than 2,500 thoroughbreds, the largest number in history, are stabled at the quaint old upstate track.

Crackers Set All-Time Home Run Mark With 82

Four Drives at Knoxville Surpass 1940 Total; Atlanta Club Still Has Six Weeks to Go.

By HAROLD FOREMAN.

You boys in Atlanta's hall of fame move on over and let some new heroes sit down with you, for this year's Atlanta Crackers have broken their all-time home-run record with six weeks of the season still remaining.

The former all-time record of 80 set last season was shattered yesterday when the Crackers hit four in the double-header at Knoxville to run their season's total to 82.

Led by Lester Burge, who has hit 32 for the highest total ever hit by any Atlanta player, the present team seems a cinch to reach the 100 mark before the season ends.

Twelve players contributed to the record-breaking home run pace with Charlie Glock and Willard Marshall being the other two chief contributors with 14 and 12, respectively.

Buddy Bates hit eight, Paul Richards five, Connie Ryan four, Emil Mailho two, and Crompton, Gerlach, Heusser, Ferrara and Bergmann, one each.

The two circuit clouts hit by Burge yesterday also sent his new record for hitting home runs on the road to a total of 21 and with the big slugger already having 32, his chances of reaching a total of 40 or more for the season seem very good. One of the blows at Knoxville cleared a fence 410 feet from home plate and a good portion of his clouts this season have been near the 400-foot mark.

He is on the market and should bring one of the highest prices ever paid for a Southern Association player. A lot of credit for Burge's success is due to Paul Richards, who had confidence in the youngster's ability and kept him in the line-up last season when it seemed that he couldn't hit a watermelon with a paddle. Burge has proven that it was only his injured hand that held him back in 1940.

Cracker fans, of course, would like to see him crack the all-time league record of 50 held by Jim Poole, when the Nashville right fielder was a joke. Burge hit 11 in the month of June and a pace like that for the next month would shove him over the 40 mark and give him at least an outside chance of reaching 50.

They meet in a 15-rounder at Newark, N. J., tomorrow night in the Pittsburgher's first bout since he whipped Bunny Davis in their return match three weeks ago. The middleweight muddle gets another airing which probably will do little toward straightening the tangle when Billy Soose, recognized as champion in New York and California, goes against George Abrams in a 10-round non-title bout at Madison Square Garden Wednesday. Abrams, a stablemate of Ken Overlin, from whom Soose won the crown, already holds two decisions over the Farrell, Pa., "pretty boy."

At New Orleans, Monday, Harry Weekly, of New Orleans, and Quentin (Baby) Breece, of Manhattan, Kan., meet over 15 rounds.

Girl Wrestlers Draw the Best Woman's Champion Here Wednesday

Wrestling is the lone sport in which women surpass the men as drawing cards. Perhaps this is due to the small number of female groaners and grunTERS, or maybe it is because the fans just like their style of entertainment. Anyway, the best crowds are invariably turning out for the women's matches.

Wednesday night at Northside Tennis courts, Mildred Burke, world's 125-pound champion, meets Gladys Gilman, the "Cowboy Luttrell of the female mat ranks," and Promoter Abe Simon is willing to wager the year's greatest crowd will be on hand. This show is being sponsored by Young Georgia Democrats, who will use the money they receive from the program to continue their camp welfare work, which consists mainly of keeping the soldiers entertained and happy.

Harry Kent and Milo Strongberg, two of the game's better he-man wrestlers, will clash in a return match. Their bout last week, a very exciting one, ended amid much confusion and they will attempt to reach a decisive point in their feud.

Doble Osborne and Tom Mahoney open the show. Usual prices will prevail.

Atlanta Makes It 18 Out of 20 From Knoxville This Season.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., July 27.—If there was any question about the Knoxville Smokies being "cousins" of the Atlanta Crackers, erase it from your mind.

They might be brothers, judging from today's double bill, which found the league leaders slugging out 20-7 and 11-8 victories. Incidentally, these victories were No. 17 and No. 18 for the Crax in 20 starts against the home folk. The twin win increased Atlanta's lead over Nashville to 16 games.

It was to be "jinx" day for the local heroes. The fans brought horseshoes, four-leaf clovers, rabbit feet and other omens of good luck—but they worked with reverse English and the Crackers were never pushed to take the game.

WELL-TIMED BLOWS. The Crackers simply took off in a hurry, kept right on rushing men across the plate with well-timed blows and some very generous fielding on Knoxville's part. The Smokies made five errors in the first game—three in the opening inning—to give the Crackers the lead.

Atlanta smashed out 21 hits in the opener and nine hits in the second. In between these hits they were given 15 bases on balls. Lester Burge, slugging first baseman for Atlanta, increased his Southern Association home run lead by crashing his 31st and 32nd home runs off the season. The second was one of the longest ever hit in the Knoxville park. It cleared the center field fence, some 410 feet from home plate. Two were aboard at the time.

RYAN AND CROMPTON. John Kroner hit two home runs for the Smokies and Paul Paynick hit another. Crompton and Ryan socked round-trippers for the leaders.

Ed Heusser, pitching in relief, won his 16th game in the opener.

Washington Seminary, in 64th Year, To Open Fall Term Sept. 11

Students Come From All Parts Of the Country

A Large Enrollment Already for the Popular Preparatory School.

Opening its doors on September 11 for its fall term—its 64th year—the Washington Seminary, historic and well and popularly known preparatory school for girls, is looking forward to one of the largest enrollments it has ever enjoyed—if not the largest.

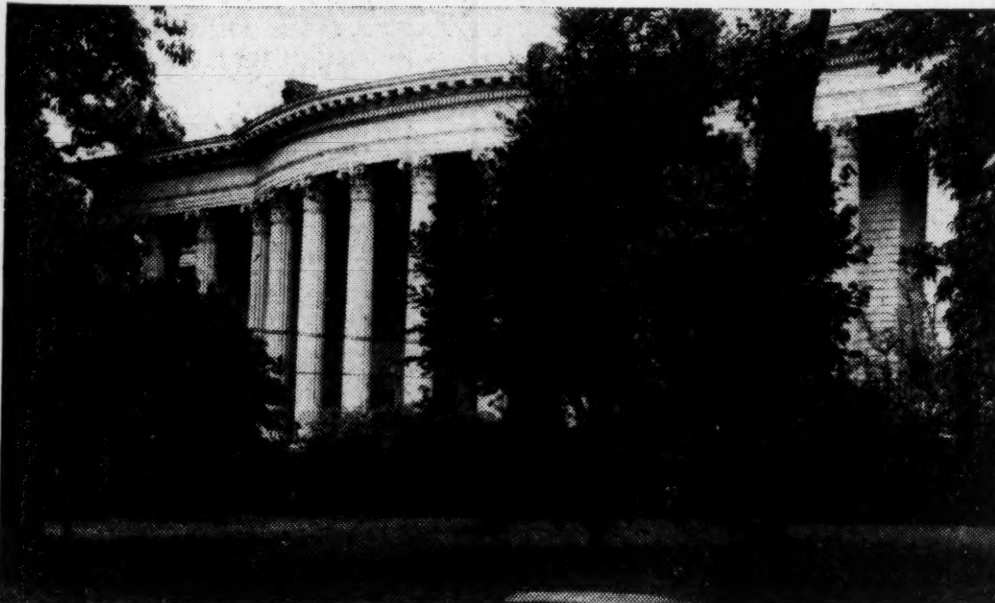

This popular school occupies a group of colonial style buildings in the heart of fashionable Peachtree residential section with a five-acre campus, being located at 1640 Peachtree road.

Enrollment so far is unusually heavy, with advanced registration from students who reside as far away as Massachusetts, California and Michigan. And while the enrollment is fast reaching the limit placed upon the number of students accepted, there is still time for the enrollment of others, but this should be made as early as possible. A limit on the admission of students is strictly observed to maintain the home-like, congenial atmosphere for which the well-known preparatory school is noted since the days when the mothers and grandmothers of the present student body attended.

The seminary is a fully accredited school and member of the Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools of the Southern States. A large proportion of its graduates enter the various class "A" colleges in all parts of the country on its certificate.

Added to its curriculum, beginning with its last term, is a course in sociology.

The departments maintained by the seminary are kindergarten, grammar school, high school. Two courses leading to graduation—college preparatory to prepare students for admission to any college, and general course, which offers a wide range of elective subjects to meet the tastes and needs of the different types of students.

The school maintains a policy begun several years ago of including in its curriculum a secretarial course for high school graduates. This is intended to fit the young woman of fashion for a career as well as for the more traditional activities of seminary graduates.

One of the features that makes Washington Seminary outstanding is the fact it is located in a city 1,100 feet above sea level, with a mild, healthy winter climate, and its open-air classrooms, used in seasonable weather, have proven unusually popular with students.

Miss Emma Scott, principal, has already accepted a large enrollment for the fall term. A feature of the principal emphasizes the fact that in the school there are two native foreign teachers who teach French, and this is begun in the kindergarten and runs through to high school students. Spanish is also taught by a corps of competent teachers.

Siegler Joins Atlanta School Of Decoration

Well-Known Artist Is Now a Member of School Faculty.

The Atlanta School of Interior Decoration adds Maurice Siegler, well-known Atlanta artist, to its faculty.

Mr. Siegler, who is assistant professor of architecture at Georgia School of Technology, is also one of Atlanta's best known artists. He has paintings hanging in various permanent collections, such as:

Richmond Academy of Arts and Sciences, Richmond, Va.
Law Library of University of Georgia, Athens, Ga.
Library of Atlanta State Capitol, Atlanta, Ga.

Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, Atlanta, Ga.
Crawford W. Long Hospital, Atlanta, Ga.
Hotel St. Francis, Newark, N. J.
Military Hospital, Fontainebleau, France.

Mr. Siegler has planned a very valuable course for the students of the Atlanta School of Interior Decoration. This class is an introduction to freehand drawing with special reference to proportion and scale, and is designed primarily for the student of interior decoration. The course includes principles and practice of freehand perspective and their applications to problems, and is planned to acquaint beginning students with fundamentals of drawing and to provide them with a working basis for further study. This is followed by advance drawing and painting.

The Atlanta School of Interior Decoration will begin its fall term September 8 in its Erlanger Theater location.

Wiping Cloths Are Featured By Rothchild

Plant Is Busy Shipping Products to Scores of Mills, Factories.

The big increase in business has kept the large force of Rothchild & Company, Inc., specialists in wiping cloths, busy day and night, washing, sterilizing and packing clean and useful cloths for the numerous purposes for which they are prepared.

The products of this plant are shipped to business concerns, factories and mills from Texas to the New England states.

"Complete sterilization of new and reclaimed materials is the outstanding feature of the service our company is offering, for we are specialists in wiping cloths, wash cloths and towels. All merchandise is guaranteed and we maintain a prompt delivery service."

"It is our policy to satisfy the trade with worthwhile merchandise and prompt and courteous service," he said. "Our merchandise is put up in convenient, sanitary cartons and bales. All merchandise is guaranteed and we maintain a prompt delivery service."

During the more than 20 years in business Rothchild & Company has made a special study of the needs of the consuming trade, commercial and industrial, and it carries in stock wiping cloths suitable for every purpose.

The new plant at 444 Edgewood, which, by the way, they would be very glad to show you if you will come around, is not a junk shop, but kept spotlessly clean. All rags are laundered and thoroughly sterilized and there is no danger from infection from cloths that come from this firm. Experts cut these rags the proper size for use and assort them correctly. You may not know, but there are from 30 to 50 different grades of wiping cloths.

Large Addition to Plant Made by Harland Company

In addition to its manufacturing plant that will enable the John H. Harland Company to serve its customers well, even with the rush of improved business, has recently been completed. The modern two-story structure adjoins the company's present daylight plant at the corner of Highland avenue and Jackson street.

The John H. Harland Company offers to businessmen of Atlanta and the southeast the production facilities of one of the south's most modern printing and lithographing plants. From a simple office form to color work requiring a high degree of skill, the local concern employs craftsmen capable of meeting the most exacting requirements. In a recent national graphic arts exhibition held in New York City the company's entry was honored with an "Award of Merit."

In addition to the enlarged manufacturing plant, a retail office supply store and local sales offices are maintained at 8 Pryor St., S. W. Offices devoted to out-of-town sales are located at 214 Ten Pryor Building.

The John H. Harland Company was founded in 1923 by John H. Harland and P. Rufus Brown, and has enjoyed a steady growth since that date. H. Grady Wilson, John

A. Butler and Charles B. Merritt are other officials.

Floyd Brothers Install Booths For Ship-a-Hoy

Cabinet Makers Feature Installation of Cafe Booths and Counters.

One of the most attractive jobs of installing booths and cabinet work done in the city for some time has just been completed by Floyd Brothers Company in the Ship-a-Hoy cafe, at 95 Luckie street, N. W. A general view of the addition made in the restaurant is shown herewith, but hardly a full conception of its artistic workmanship can be secured from a look at the picture.

Floyd Brothers are located at 535 Flat Shoals avenue, S. W. They are among the best known cabinetmakers in this area, and have supplied many homes and business concerns with such accessories as make for convenience and beauty. The addition recently completed at Ship-a-Hoy has been noticed and commented upon by its many patrons, who admire the neat and attractive manner in which the work is executed.

The concern has just completed two large restaurant jobs in Summer, S. C., which included booths, lunch counter and cigar stand. Their execution along this line of work is outstanding for its neatness and durability. They have also installed a nice job for Davis Brothers at 104 Luckie street, northwest.

The firm, of which J. M. Floyd is president, specializes in hotel and restaurant tables, and in

Longer Draft Vote Speeded By Jap Moves

Senatorial Opposition Weakens Due to Threat in Far East.

WASHINGTON, July 27.—(AP)—Senatorial opposition to legislation extending the service of draftees and other soldiers appeared to be diminishing today in the light of war-like developments in the Far East.

Although some opponents made it clear that they would continue to fight the proposal relentlessly when the senate takes it up, probably by Wednesday of this week, others who had been expected to vote against it said they were re-evaluating their position pending further clarification of Japan's move into Indo-China.

Among these was a Republican senator, who, asking anonymity, told reporters that if it appeared that American possessions were threatened by the Japanese move he would reverse his position and support the bill.

Reynolds' Statement.
But Chairman Reynolds, Democrat, who cast the lone negative vote when the Senate Military Affairs Committee approved the legislation Saturday, issued a statement today in which he said that the resolution in effect was "notice to the warring factions that congress has authorized the preparation of the armed forces of the United States to enter the present World War as an active, participating, shooting ally of Russia and Great Britain."

Nine other committee members voted for the resolution. The House Military Committee called a closed session for tomorrow to draft its version of similar legislation, but the house was not scheduled to take up the proposal until it had disposed of another piece of major legislation—the $3,529,200,000 tax bill.

The house is expected to devote most of the coming week to the tax measure, which was formally recommended by the Ways and Means Committee Saturday.

Debate on Bill Near.
Debate on the bill itself is expected to begin Tuesday or Wednesday, with tomorrow given over to discussion of a rule which would close the measure to amendments other than those submitted by the committee.

Members of the Senate Military Committee who supported the extension resolution said that the measure omitted any reference to a War Department suggestion that congress declare the existence of a national emergency. Instead, they said, it stated merely that the national interest is imperilled, and on this ground authorized the President to continue the services of all persons in the military forces as long as they are needed or until congress terminates the President's authority. The resolution also removes the present limitation restricting to 900,000 the number of selectees who may be in training at one time.

Finns Report Conquest Of Occupied Territory

HELSINKI, Finland, July 27.—(AP)—Finland's reported conquest of the greater part of the land she ceded to Soviet Russia at the close of the 1939-40 Finnish-Russian war has heightened expressions of homesickness among 500,000 Karelian refugees.

Even among the thousands of families settled upon new farms granted by the state, Finnish observers said today, 95 per cent are ready to return to their war-torn homes.

Authorities have a special problem in restraining the impatient until the province has been cleared of mines and made hygienically safe.

The advance of Finnish forces was declared to have been so rapid in the five weeks of the fresh hostilities that the Soviet scorched-earth program was largely foiled and many villages and farms were left in good condition.

Help! Police! Emergency Caller Here Wants a Crystal Gazer!

Patrolman Raymond Edmondson, clerk in the chief's office at police headquarters, added one to his "book" yesterday.

The telephone rang, and a man's voice said: "I've lost my eye glasses. Can you give me the name of a good clairvoyant?"

After the first shock passed, Edmondson explained that police do not give out such information and, besides, there is a city ordinance against fortune-tellers, crystal gazers, et al.

SHANGHAI 'TERRORS.'

SHANGHAI, July 27.—(AP)—Numerous European and Jewish refugees and hundreds of Chinese civilians reported today that they had been manhandled by Japanese marines during a 12-hour "reign of terror" in the Hongkong section after the fatal shooting of a Japanese navy warrant officer.

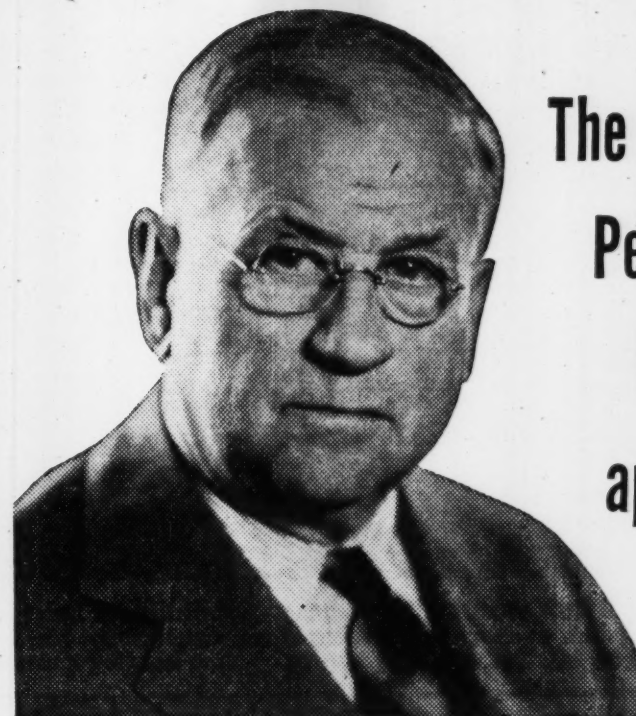

Housewives of Nation Grow Peach Conscious

Housewives throughout the nation are becoming "peach conscious," Pat F. O'Brien, chairman of the Fulton County Food Industry Committee, said yesterday.

O'Brien pointed out that the peach producers industry and the food trades industry are carrying on an educational campaign throughout the nation to teach housewives how to prepare peaches, and to show them the health protecting value of peaches in their diet.

TREASURER REPORTS.

McDONOUGH, Ga., July 27.—The report of Treasurer Lesley Hand, of Henry county, recently released, shows a balance at the end of the second quarter of $36,241.80. The Honorable Harold L. Ickes, Petroleum Coordinator for National Defense, has appealed to every citizen to save gasoline...

Now it's up to you!

It's time for plain talk.

Unless the public cuts gasoline consumption by 1/3, rationing is sure.

And it will come soon!

The Petroleum Coordinator says the situation is serious.

And we know that something has to be done!

The Petroleum Coordinator asks that all speed limits be strictly enforced.

Fast driving wastes gasoline. Slow driving will save it.

Every good citizen will cooperate.

This is your chance as a liberty-loving American to do your share for national defense—and help yourself too!

Many tankers which normally supply the East have been called into the service of National Defense.

There is no shortage of oil, America is the largest producer of petroleum in the world—transportation is the only problem.

More tankers and pipelines are being built.

Meanwhile, less gasoline will be available.

Isn't it better to reduce your own needs voluntarily? Isn't that the American way?

Be proud to save gasoline! Ask others to do the same. At right are 10 ways to do it. Read them carefully.

Start right away to use one-third less gasoline.

SAVE GASOLINE FOR NATIONAL DEFENSE

PUBLISHED UNDER THE AUSPICES OF THE PETROLEUM INDUSTRY, DISTRICT No. 1 MARKETING COMMITTEE FOR NATIONAL DEFENSE

HERE ARE 10 DO'S AND DON'TS
THAT WILL HELP YOU
USE ONE-THIRD LESS GASOLINE

DO

1. Have your carburetor adjusted for the most economical mixture of gasoline and air.
2. Have ignition system and spark plugs checked regularly for most economical performance.
3. Keep transmission and differential properly lubricated, lubricate chassis regularly. Use correct grade of lubricating oil in engine and change it regularly for maximum efficiency.
4. Keep the cooling system clean and filled to proper level.
5. Keep tires properly inflated. Keep brakes adjusted to eliminate "drag."

DON'T

1. Don't speed. Driving at high speed greatly increases fuel consumption. Wind resistance increases by geometric proportion to speed. At 60 miles an hour it is four times greater than at 30. Drive at a reasonable, safe speed and save.
2. Don't make "jack-rabbit" starts. Driving in first and second gear multiplies the consumption of gasoline. Watch your starts at traffic lights—avoid sudden bursts of speed.
3. Don't let your car idle at the curb—don't race your motor when starting. This is hard on the motor and wastes gasoline.
4. Don't use your car unless you have to. Plan your driving. Group your errands.
5. Don't forget others. Share the transportation your car provides—double up with friends going the same way.

Officials Here Assisting All To Aid Defense

Even Small Businesses Can Play Important Roles.

By CELESTINE SIBLEY.
They may look like "walk-on" parts, but the roles the butcher, the baker and the chicken-feed maker have to play in the drama of defense preparation are of four-star importance.

You can take it from the defense officials, who are rapidly making Atlanta the defense hub of the southeast.

These officials, who are on the job in the Federal Reserve building from early morning to late afternoon, are here to help manufacturers, producers, businessmen and just plain John Doe, the consumer, turn their efforts to greater national defense production.

And so far they have found few businesses too small or insignificant to play some important role in defense preparedness.

Overalls Maker.
There was the small manufacturer from Macon who has been making overalls. Can he turn his machines and labor to making Navy uniforms?

W. C. Cram, district manager of defense contracts and a husky North Carolinian with years of experience in southern industry, thinks he might and tells him the proper means of seeking the contract he wants.

Another small industrialist wants to engage in defense production, but is uncertain whether his wood-working plant employing 20 workers can make rifle stocks needed by the Army. How can he determine if his equipment will do the work?

Ivan Sagal, industrial engineer of defense contracts, is dispatched to the plant to analyze equipment and determine how it can best be put to defense production.

Perhaps it's a matter of determining when a bid invitation is received from the Navy what southern plants can best handle the job and whether the management can be interested in submitting a bid.

Lloyd B. Raisty, a University of Georgia economics professor on leave to the government, is going over indices, listings, records and files to try to fit the needs of the proposed contract to the plant facilities available in this area. After the prime contract is let, his job begins all over again—this time finding smaller plants to which the prime contractor may subcontract part of the work.

Phone Rings.
The phone rings. A small tin can manufacturer wants to know how he can get a priority order for the tin he needs—tin, a strategic material, is under mandatory control.

John B. Reeves, an Atlanta, district manager of the priorities division, tells him what to do, explaining the procedure necessary to get the material he needs, provided, of course, he can establish the necessity for his request.

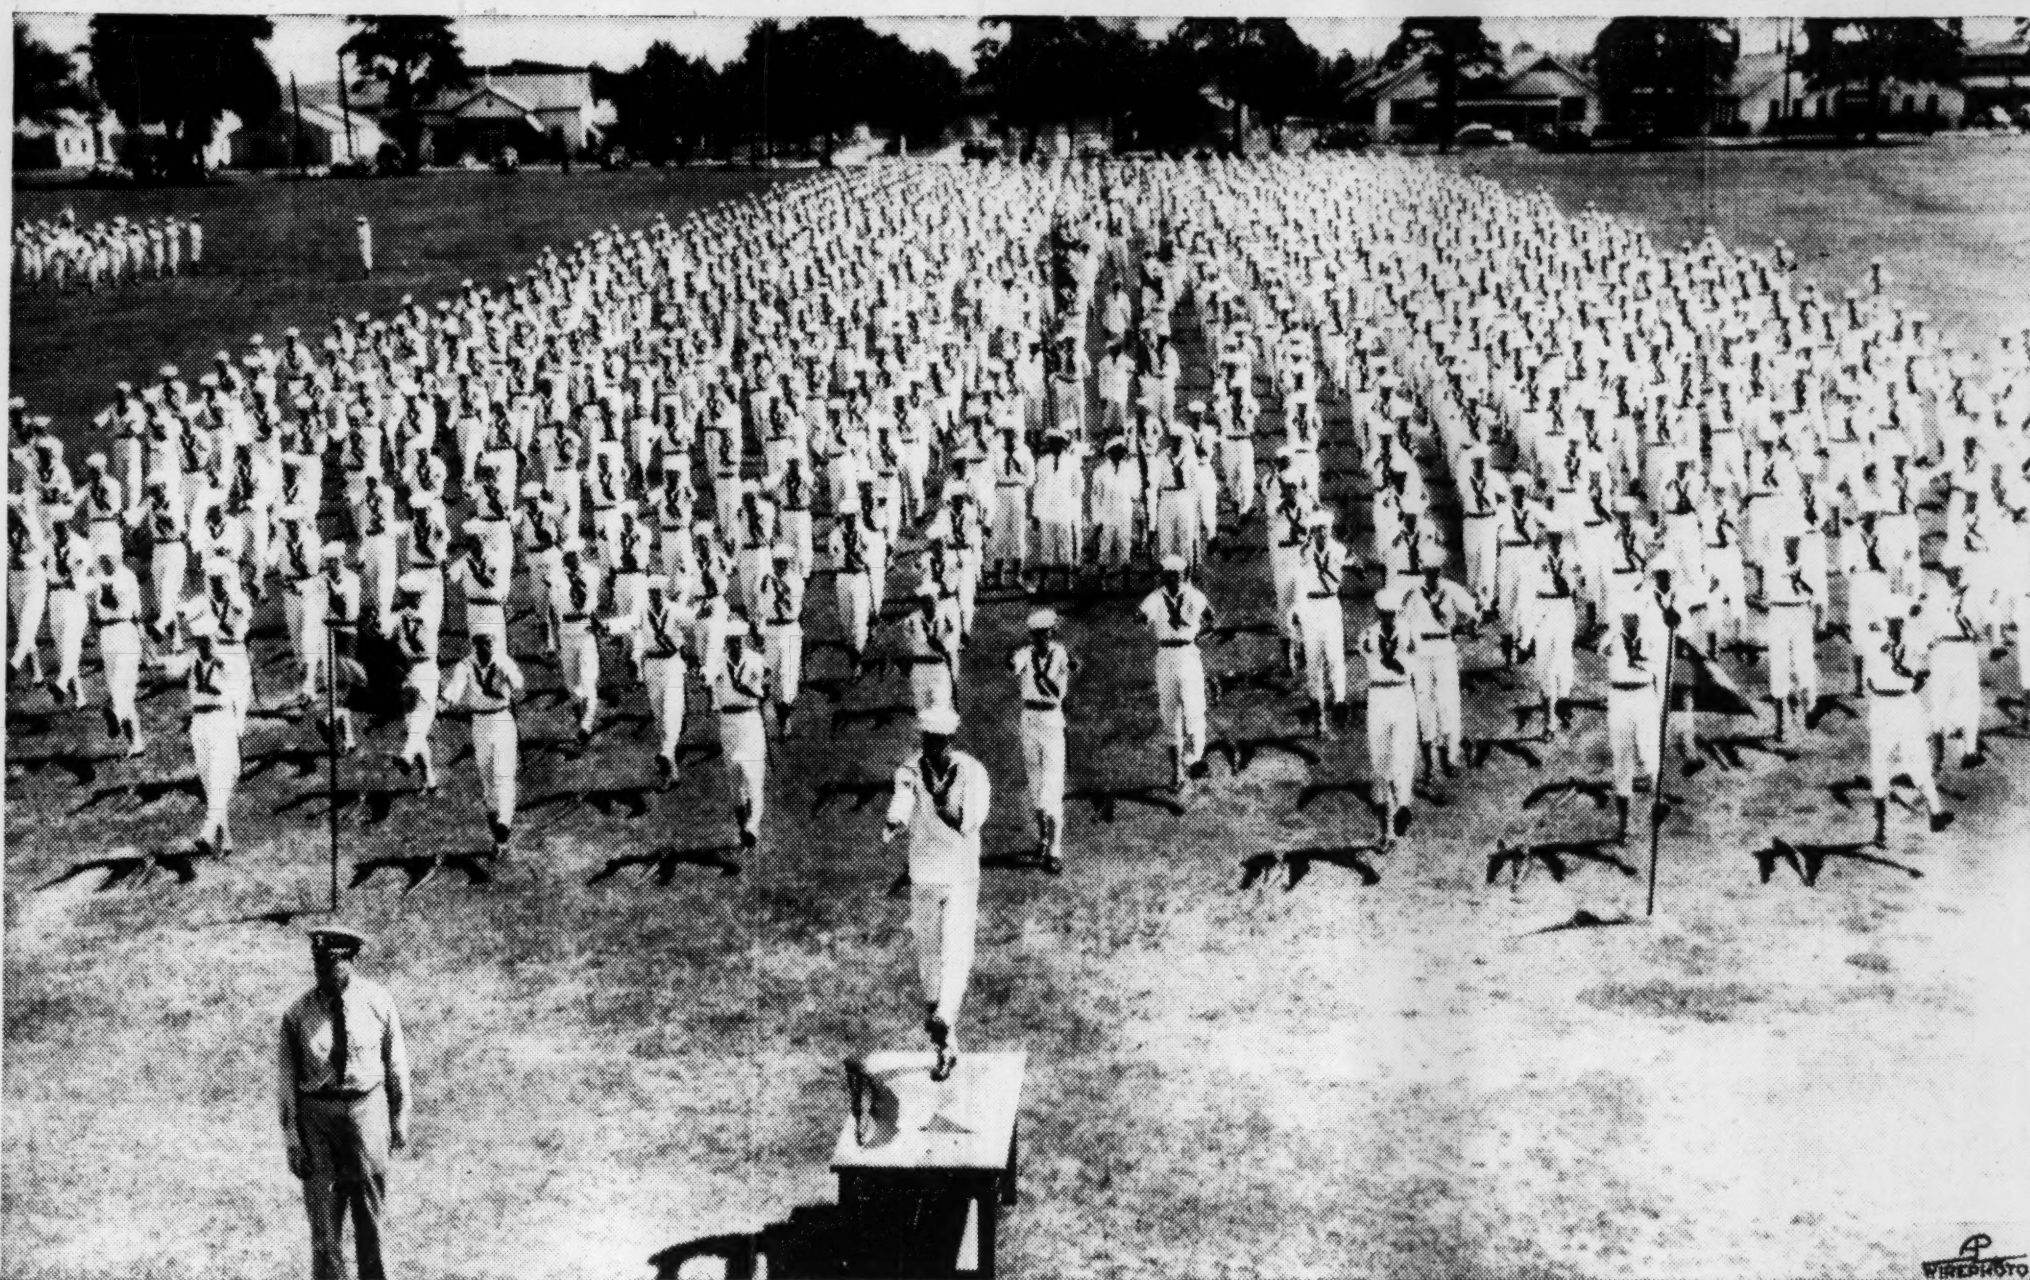

At Georgia Tech, Professor J. E. McDaniel, district representative of the Training Within Industry of the OPM, is advising and consulting with educators, industrial and labor representatives from all the southeast. He is directing the enormous task of training labor to fill the jobs created by the expansion of industry.

Thus far, nearly 100,000 additional workers to man machines of expanding defense plants have been trained in the southeast in the past year through the co-operative efforts of industry and the OPM, McDaniel disclosed.

Training Program.
Plants and mills in Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Tennessee and Mississippi—the district included in McDaniel's territory—have utilized the "in-plant" training program of the OPM to increase their available supply of skilled labor and prepare already skilled workmen for foreman's and supervisors' jobs.

Nearly 300 industrial plants throughout the area have participated in the "in-plant" training program, which involves no classes, school sessions or formal instruction.

The "raw material" in the form of untrained workers is placed beside skilled operators of lathes, drills, shapers, milling machines, and other machine tools. The workmen on the job show the in-

Germany Said Planning Quick Peace Effort

Partitioning of Europe Outlined in Turkey by Diplomat.

ISTANBUL, Turkey, July 26.—(Delayed)—(AP)—A detailed report that Germany plans to partition European Russia when and if she conquers the U. S. S. R. up to the Urals mountain divide and then offer a "painless peace" to the British Empire gained credence today in pro-British circles who said it came from an Axis diplomat.

The diplomat—not, however, a representative of either Germany, Italy or Japan but rather from one of the satellites—was said to have outlined the broad scheme in a private conference with an allied official here.

The conference was said to have come during a stopover by the diplomat en route home from his war-vacated post at Moscow.

From him, a pro-British source said, was gained Germany's general plan for a quick peace before United States interest in the war becomes so deep as to make the envisaged peace impossible. The plan and subordinate factors in it were outlined as follows:

Would Split Urals.
1. Russia up to the Urals would fall divided into two classifications, one to include the Ukraine under a German governor and the other to be divided among Rumania, Turkey and Poland.

Rumania's would be a strip along the Black Sea coast, including Odessa; Turkey would get part of the Caucasus wherein lie Turkish minorities, and Poland, to be reconstituted in some form not fully independent, would get back all the territory Russia occupied in September, 1939, and possibly more.

2. Japan wants Russian Asiatic territory from Vladivostok westward to Lake Baikal. It is not said definitely that she will get it. Former Foreign Minister Yosuke Matsuoka once pledged Japanese entrance into the war (according to the outline of the German plan) but Germany does not want her to fight now because of the likelihood it would bring in the United States.

3. Italy is claiming Tunisia, Ethiopia and control of Egypt but the Germans oppose this (so the outline goes) because their peace offer would stipulate that the British Empire be left intact on condition Britain recognizes Germany as the sole great power on the continent of Europe.

4. Once Russia is occupied as far as the Urals Germany will offer to recognize Britain's place in the world as a naval power and to reassure her Germany will restore political independence to countries of the northwest coast—Norway, Denmark, Holland and Belgium. (Here again France might be mentioned, but is not.)

Measure of Independence.
5. The German right to disposal of central and eastern Europe must not be contested. Germany will offer the Czechs a measure of independence but they will not be permitted to reunite with the Slovaks.

6. Upon completion of the Russian campaign Germany will halt hostilities on all fronts. Even if the British continue to fight, Germany will not respond for a certain period, so as to make the point that the war, if it continues, goes on under British, not German, initiative.

7. Germany considers that for this plan to succeed the United States must not actually be in the war when the plan is advanced.

Gallup Poll Reveals:

Separate U. S. Air Arm Favored

By GEORGE GALLUP, Director, American Institute of Public Opinion, Copyright, 1941.

PRINCETON, N. J., July 26.—Whether America should have an independent air corps headed by a separate cabinet department, or continue with Army and Navy air sections as at present, remains a subject of debate in official Washington and in the American press.

While the general public has yet to hear all the arguments pro and con, the opinion of at least one relatively well-informed group of citizens has apparently been thrown on the side of a separate air corps. A survey of representative groups of men and women listed in "Who's Who in America," familiar red book of American achievement in many fields, shows those with opinions about 2 to 1 in favor of a new air establishment.

Germans count on certain opinion in the United States to compel British acceptance of the proposals.

Pro-British sources here said the whole report sounded highly credible. Talk that Germany was planning to offer peace after licking Russia was current in Berlin last May but officials there scoffed at the story on the ground that Germany planned no attack on Russia.

TURKEY EXPECTS NAZI CRISIS SOON

ANKARA, Turkey, July 26.—(Delayed)—(AP)—Turkey expects a crisis with Germany if Russian resistance collapses by mid-September.

A high official said, "we do not fully know yet why the German command chose the Soviet instead of Turkey as the objective, but certainly the Nazis were prepared for either."

Whether Turkey again becomes the probable objective depends on the extent the German army is exhausted by the terrific fighting in the Far East," he went on.

"The German time table has had to be re-drafted because of unexpected strong resistance by the Red forces but if the latter are overcome by mid-September then a crisis will develop here."

Carrollton, Ala., Student Wins Speaking Contest

GAINESVILLE, Fla., July 27.—(AP)—R. L. Jones, of Carrollton, Ala., is the 1941 champion among vocational agriculture students of Florida, Georgia and Alabama.

Jones won the honor in a tri-state FFA public speaking contest at Camp O'Leary, near High Springs, Fla., last night.

Speaking on the subject, "The Soil: A National Heritage," the young Alabamian defeated Albert L. Morris Jr., of Harlem, Ga., and Elwood Carr, Gainesville, Fla.

Czechoslovaks Expect To Resume Republic

BOONTON, N. J., July 27.—(AP)—Dr. Jan Papanek, of Chicago, representing the provisional Czechoslovakian government, asserted today that steps were already under way to re-establish the Czech republic once Germany has been defeated.

He expressed his country's gratitude for United States and British aid, and added that Czechoslovaks now residing here were loyal to their adopted land, "not like Bundists who claim loyalty."

Vichy - German Dakar Defense Program Urged

Nazi - Controlled Press Calls for Changes in Cabinet.

VICHY, France, July 27.—(AP)—The German-controlled Paris press started a campaign today for a military accord between France and Germany for the defense of Dakar and other French African possessions from possible American attack.

In order to carry out such a program, wrote Jean Luchaire in Les Nouveaux Temps, a complete shake-up of the Vichy cabinet is necessary. This, he declared, would provide a government willing and able to carry out such a policy.

Les Nouveaux Temps said that "if the Battle of the Atlantic develops according to the logic of events Dakar and French West Africa will be dangerously menaced."

(Dakar, westernmost tip of Africa, lies 1,715 miles from Recife, Brazil. Dakar, months ago the target of a miscarried Free French attempt at occupation, actually is further west than the easternmost tip of Iceland, now under British-American occupation.)

The Paris press based its argument for a French-German defense accord on the same premise as their demand for the now concluded Tokyo-Vichy accord for joint Japanese-French defense of French Indo-China.

"The French possibilities in Africa, because of the armistice regime, have been reduced to a degree incompatible with efforts which the Anglo-Americans may be able to bring to bear in case of massive attacks," Luchaire wrote.

(The argument on Indo-China was that it was threatened by the British, Free French and Chinese.)

"We affirm frankly that there is no certain way to preserve our African empire without a complete French-German accord," the editorialist added.

Luchaire declared that "the Vichy government and the French high command in Africa will surely refuse to bow (to the United States). They will resist with means they have accumulated to this end during long months.

"But will these means be proportionate to those of the attacker and if they are not will France have to stand the loss of another part of her empire?"

"Let us not forget that if the United States ends by being pushed into war by President Roosevelt our Antilles and Guiana possessions, advanced points of Europe on the American continent and in American waters, will be the first involuntarily to change their flag."

Soft shining hair adds the finishing touch to Margaret Lockwood's flawless beauty. Hair needn't lose its sheen and charm in summer, for there's a lotion mentioned below which will protect it from the ravages of sun and water. Miss Lockwood is currently playing in "The Stars Look Down."

New Liquid Shields Hair From Sun

By Winifred Ware.

A woman's "crowning glory" can easily, in summer time, turn into an ugly duckling. Hot weather and summer activities seem to do their very worst to a woman's hair.

However, with the aid of a certain golden liquid, hair need not turn straw-colored, look like furniture-stuffing, be dull and dry, or too oily. Sun bleaching, too many wettings from swimming, not to mention salt water, and sand and hot frying winds certainly can wreck a once beautiful head of hair. Not only do they leave the hair temporarily streaked and unmanageable, but they can give lasting trouble by driving out the natural oils. Back to the golden liquid which prevents all this unattractiveness—you can get a bottle for $1.00, and it will last a whole summer or longer. The best way to apply it is with an atomizer, for then you get it on more evenly and economically. However, it can be applied with the palms of your hands if you prefer.

This liquid shields out the harmful rays of the sun and thereby prevents the hair from bleaching or drying out. The protective film also keeps water from removing the natural oils. In fact, you'll find that this lotion, if applied before you put on your swim cap, will discourage the water from seeping up to your top hair.

The preparation doesn't make your hair oily or greasy if used properly, but acts rather like a brilliantine, giving the hair added highlights and sheen. It makes your hair more manageable at the same time that it protects.

I'll be glad to tell you what it is and where you can get it if you call me at Walnut 6565 or write me in care of The Constitution, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Fruits, Vegetables Liberate Energy

By Ida Jean Kain.

The average man does not take kindly to a change in his victuals. A woman usually will accept readily any innovation that promises beauty. But a man is not so easily sold. His reaction is apt to be: "What's wrong with the way I eat—and whose business is it, anyway?"

Is he going to eat whole wheat bread when he has always preferred white, or take vegetables and a salad and two glasses of milk a day just because they are "good" for him? He is not. He wants the facts. And here they are:

Food furnishes energy. But unless you get enough of the protective elements—the vitamins and minerals supplied in whole grains, the newly enriched bread and cereals, green vegetables, fruits and dairy products—you cannot use all the energy you get. These elements are energy carriers. They are necessary to liberate energy to its full extent.

When any of the essential protective foods are missing from the day's menu, the result is a disturbance in the smooth functioning of our machinery. It is the smooth functioning that makes for health and abundant energy.

If you take too many of your foods in refined stuff like concentrated sweets, starches and fats, and not enough in the protective foods, the food for which you are paying out good money does not yield the proper dividends in health.

The statistics show that the average person gets enough calories and protein and not enough Vitamins A, B and C and calcium. In terms of food, this means you need more dairy products and cheese for calcium. You need more green leafy and yellow vegetables for minerals and Vitamin A, so that your resistance is raised and you have more vigor. You need more whole grain or enriched breads and cereals for Vitamin B, the vitamin that helps to build sound nerves. And you should have more citrus fruits and juices or tomatoes and raw cabbage to furnish Vitamin C, which promotes a high level of positive health.

Of course, if you have taken a superabundance of calories and they have been put away as excess fat, it is not a good idea to add to your fat shortage. There is no percentage in excess fat. In that case, substitutions are necessary. The calories can be lessened by cutting down on the sugars and concentrated sweets, which furnish nothing but calories, and by cutting down on the fats that boost the calorie score and add nothing in the way of protection.

But on the average the only changes necessary to bring the menus up to the allowances are in the increased use of dairy products and fresh fruits and vegetables, plus a switch to the whole grain or enriched breads and cereals. Those are very minor changes when you consider the results—a higher state of health and efficiency.

YOUR DIETITIAN,
Ida Jean Kain.

The revised "Count Your Vitamins Chart" sends the requirements in units. Send for the chart and check your menus against the recommended allowances. Write Ida Jean Kain, The Atlanta Constitution, Atlanta, Ga.

The Child's Welfare Should Weigh Heavily In Contemplating Divorce

By Dixie George.

Dear Dixie:

I have been married five years and have a little girl one year old. My husband and I have been separated for six months, and I am wondering whether to go back to him or not. He is very jealous and in addition to that he gets drunk about twice a month. I do not love him, but I do not want to tell him. If he would just walk out of my life on his own accord, I do not think I would miss him much. I am in love with another man, but no one knows about it, not even the man himself. I know there is no chance with this man, for he never even notices me. I have thought of going to work, but I would not leave my baby with anyone in whom I have no confidence and knew that they would take care of her. Please tell me what to do. I have had no training for any type of work.

HELPLESS.

If you walk out now, you will be jumping from the well-known frying pan into the fire. If you have no prospect of a job, and if you have never had any training for any type of job, I do not see what advantage it would be to give up what you have now. Remember you will have to support your baby and as she grows older, expenses will increase. It seems to me that the thing for you to do is to center your attention on the rearing of your child. As for your husband, I think maybe you have been a little bit to blame for the situation. I know it is hard to live with a jealous man and one who gets drunk, but I assume that there is one thing in his favor at least, and that is the fact that he is supporting you and the baby. The thing for you to do is to try to make him overcome his jealous moods. Jealousy is only a sign of an inferiority complex, so by the right handling you can make him feel superior and he will gradually overcome this complex. I do wonder if you really mean it when you say you wish he would walk out of your life on his own accord? You must hold your marriage ties very lightly and have very little feeling. You may not love him, but he is your husband, and he is the father of your child, so I think that after five years of married life you could try to take it. If you feel that you have done all you can and the situation is still hopeless, then leave him and get a divorce. Don't continue living such a haphazard life. Either go back to him and make him a home or leave him.

As for this other man, it is too absurd to even discuss. Why waste time on a man who does not even know of your existence. You are acting like a high school girl, rather than a grown woman, a wife, and a mother.

SUMMER FLIRTATION.

Dear Dixie:

I have been going with a boy for two years and I thought I loved him. He loves me very much. A few months ago, I came to Atlanta for a short visit. While here I met my fourth cousin for the first time, and I fell in love with him. He seemed to like me too, and we went out together. A few weeks ago, he told me that he loved me. But, when I mentioned marriage, he said he didn't love me any more. What shall I do? Shall I continue to see him, or should I go back to my old beau from my home town?

HEARTBROKEN.

Go on back to your beau in your home town, and forget about your cousin. Of course, if you are still in love with him, then stay and see if you can win him, but I think if I were you, I would just charge it up to a midsummer flirtation. Just because a boy tells a girl he loves her is no sign that he wants to marry her. How could the men possibly marry all the girls they said they loved? And another thing, it wasn't your place to mention marriage. If he loved you enough to want to marry you, he would have told you and would have begged you to set the date. I think you took him and his sweet nothings too seriously, so my advice to you is to go back home.

MY DAY: President Exhibits Retentive Memory.

By Eleanor Roosevelt.

HYDE PARK, Friday.—Four of us sat on the south portico of the White House last night having dinner—the President; our daughter, Anna; our cousin, Monroe D. Robinson, and I. Mr. Robinson had just returned from Peru and was telling the President of his impressions. He thinks Peru is one of the most interesting countries he has ever visited and cannot wait to return. Mr. Robinson has made some real friends and feels that they like him just as much as he likes them.

In the midst of his talk, my husband, in a very quiet way, said: "Have you ever happened to see an old book which has an illustration of a Peruvian Indian playing golf? They played golf in Peru years before they played it in Scotland. To all intents and purposes it was the same game except that instead of having to end up in a little tin cup, they had to hit a very small stick."

Monroe's face was a study. He had hardly expected to be told something about Peru, especially something which he felt might even be news to some of his Peruvian friends! Then my husband went on to explain that in college he had bought the books every year for the Fly Club and Pudding Club libraries. For the Fly Club, he had concentrated on books of old travel, and among them had found this particular book, which he considered the most interesting and which furnished the basis of some of his knowledge of Peru.

What wouldn't I give to have as retentive a memory as the President has, and at the same time always to be able to reach back into my mind and pick out the particular thing applicable to the conversation of the moment. Hours afterwards I can sometimes remember something which would have been very valuable, if it had only come to me when I was actually talking.

We all reached Hyde Park this morning about 10 o'clock. Two ladies came to lunch with us and this afternoon I had a visitor talking to me about Camp William James in Vermont. This camp is an educational venture in living which I think may produce some very interesting results. Already four boys from there have gone down to Mexico to work with 30 young Mexicans in the area stricken by the earthquake.

Washington is usually hotter than New York City or Hyde Park, but the first thing we were told this morning was that it had been 96 degrees here yesterday. It certainly has been warmer here than it was the last two days in Washington.

POINTS FOR PARENTS

By Edyth Thomas Wallace.

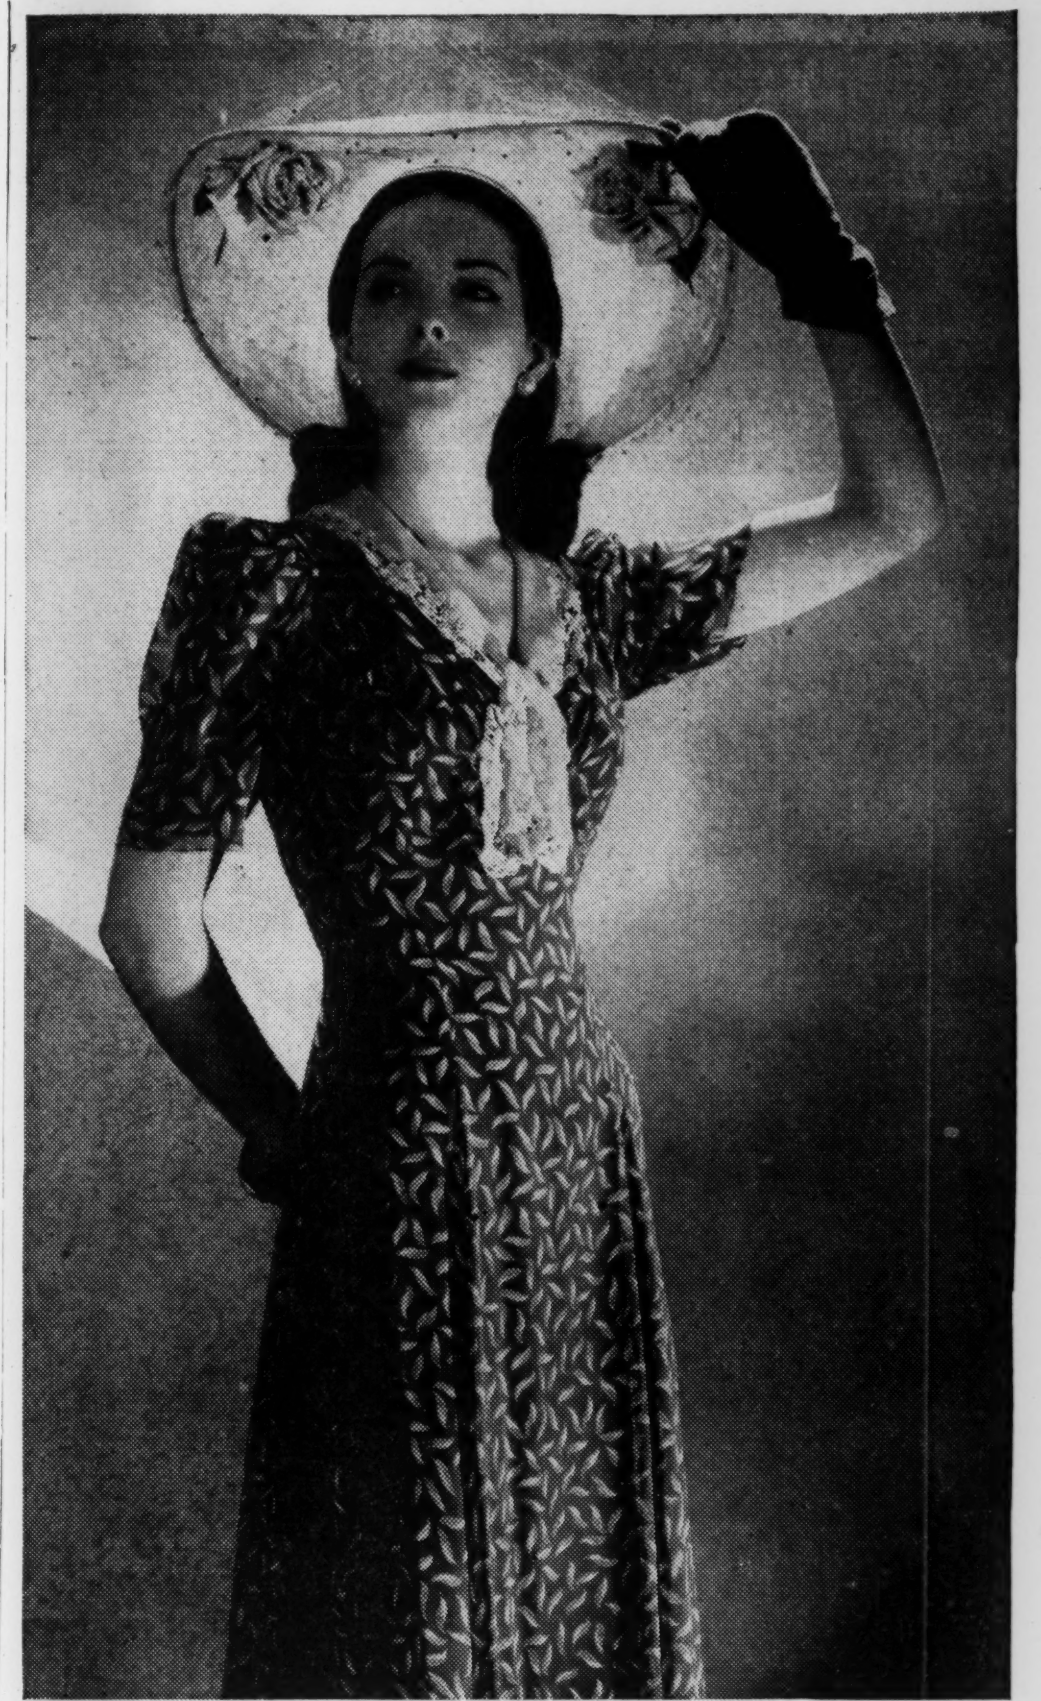

Son: "Let's go faster, Daddy. Let's see how fast we can go." Father: "No, Son. We're going as fast now as the safety laws allow us to travel."

Parents who practice obedience—because-of-fear-of-punishment need not be surprised if their children follow the same rule.

Pattern 7065.

For midsummer chic, this leaf-green rayon sheer is ideal. The cool lace-edged collar is of white rayon. Note the soft, flattering lines at the neck.

Slender Princess Lines for Cool Sheers

For cool midsummer chic, this attractive daytime style is as easy to make as it is effective. The figure flattery of slender princess lines is accentuated by soft draping through the V-necked bodice and a graceful flare in the skirt. A face-framing rolled collar with ends looping softly at the front provides the dainty trimming note and the short sleeves are simply finished. Fine leaf-green rayon sheer with a fresh white leaf pattern is used for the model pictured with a lace-edged collar of cool white rayon sheer repeating the snowy accent of the print. Pattern No. 1443 is designed in sizes 12, 14, 16, 18 and 20. Civil Service Jobs Offered By Defense

In all parts of the United States, from peaceful rural districts to big cities, Uncle Sam's Civil Service workers carry on his business. How huge this business is, how you might fit in may be glimpsed from these questions.

Q. What and where are the jobs in the postal service?
A. Postal service jobs are everywhere. A city letter carrier starts at $1,700, a railway postal clerk at $1,850. A rural carrier gets $1,800, plus mileage.

Q. Are there many chances and where in clerical work?
A. Defense has added thousands of clerical jobs; even in regular years Uncle Sam has openings for about 6,000 stenographers and typists in his country-wide office force. Junior stenographers get about $1,440, seniors $1,620. Junior typists get $1,260 a year.

Q. May I choose where I work?
A. Eligibles living in the area in which the job is located are considered first. In some tests you're asked your choice.

Q. Where are the best opportunities for jobs now?
A. In defense. Machinists, boat-builders may make up to $8.88 a day. An engineering draftsman gets up to $2,600 yearly.

How to apply, what tests must you take? Our 40-page booklet, Guide to U. S. Government Jobs, answers many such questions. Lists typical jobs, pay and requirements. Gives sample tests.

A. Any bid made when the responding hand could have passed because partner's last bid was not forcing.
Q. How can discoloration of peeled bananas be prevented?
A. Dip them in, or sprinkle them with, canned pineapple juice, fresh or canned grapefruit juice, orange juice or lemon juice.
Q. How may I remove olive oil or cotton-seed oil stains from table linen?

Shirtwaister Is Flatteringly Youthful

By Lillian Mae.

Pattern 4867.
The tailored shirtwaister is ageless . . . timeless . . . limitless in its wear-everywhere style. Lillian Mae presents an especially becoming shirtwaister mode for matrons in Pattern 4867. Every line is planned for youthful flattery. The bodice, cut with roomy ease, is darted at the shoulders and above the waist. You'll like the novel shape of the notched collar with its squared edges. And there's more fashion news interest in the buckled belt, softened by perky pointed tail ends. Two front skirt panels lend slim, graceful lines to your figure. Have short, three-quarter or long sleeves. A shantung or a smart spun rayon are nice fabric suggestions for this quick-to-stitch, useful frock.

Pattern 4867 is available in women's sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48. Size 36 takes 3 5-8 yards 35-inch fabric.

Cherished Heirlooms Given Bride-Elect Emily Matheson

By SALLY FORTH.

• • • QUITE OFTEN brides list among their wedding gifts heirlooms which have been handed down from generation to generation in their families. Emily Matheson, who will marry John Underwood next month, is one of these fortunate brides, for among her cherished presents is a pair of hand-woven linen sheets which originally belonged to her great-grandmother, the late Chloe Owen Noble, of Windsor, Conn. Mrs. Noble, it seems, made the sheets for her own trousseau before her marriage to Phineas Noble and, surprisingly enough, they are in perfect condition. The last owner was Emily's mother, Mrs. Robert E. Matheson, who was Lola Wanamaker, of Orangeburg, S. C., before her marriage.

Sentiment is also attached to the handsome mahogany desk which was bequeathed Emily by her grandmother, the late Mrs. Emily Scovill Wanamaker, of South Carolina. Emily, you see, had admitted the lovely piece of furniture since childhood, for since her earliest recollection it had graced her grandmother's home. Another heirloom given to Emily is a dainty coral and white cameo necklace which used to belong to her great-grandmother, the late Jane Noble Scovill.

Emily, you know, is being honored at a series of gala parties prior to her wedding and on August 2 she will again be complimented at a soft drink party which is being planned by Mrs. E. Fay Pearce and Mrs. A. D. DuBoise at the home of Mrs. Pearce on Beverly road.

• • • THE CHRISTENING of Kathleen Elizabeth Luke, four-month-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hardy F. Luke, took place at the morning service of Grace Methodist church yesterday. Rev. Henry H. Jones, pastor, officiated.

The little girl is the third in her family to bear her name, her mother having formerly been Kathleen Elizabeth Baché, daughter of Mrs. G. Bingham Baché Sr., who was before her marriage, Kathleen Elizabeth Hewlett, of Savannah. She is the great-granddaughter of W. R. Hewlett, of Atlanta, completing a direct line of four generations. Her paternal grandfather is D. B. Luke, of Fitzgerald, and her maternal grandfather is G. B. Baché Sr., of Atlanta.

The baby's christening dress, given her by her grandmother, was of white batiste, trimmed in lace and hand embroidery, with pink satin streamers falling from the shoulders to the hem. A matching slip was worn with it.

Miss Margie Sauls and John Prator served as the baby's Godparents.

• • • FRIENDS OF gadabout complaining bitterly that they never get to enjoy her company any more, for no manner of alluring bait in the way of social entertainment can keep her at home. And when she is here, she spends the whole time doing nothing but packing or unpacking.

Within six weeks Eleanor has been a guest at five house parties, which is something of a record in popularity! But that isn't all, for she's busy repacking her bags for still another trip. This time she is going to Bethlehem, Pa., where she will visit Mrs. J. L. Brooks Jr., the former Madeline Adair, of Atlanta.

From there she will journey to the mountains of North Carolina, where she will join her family for ten days. The first of September Eleanor will go to Washington, D. C., where she will visit her brother, Lieutenant Harry Stafford, who is a member of the Quartermaster General's Department.

Following her stay in the national capital, she will go to New York City, where she will join Carolyn McTigue, her former roommate at Georgetown Visitation Convent, in Washington. Needless to say, the two belles are looking forward to a jolly reunion.

Miss Bloodworth Wed to Mr. Deal At Garden Rites

Miss Molly Bloodworth, of Decatur, became the bride of John Joseph Deal at a ceremony performed Saturday evening at 7 o'clock in the garden of the bride's parents, Major and Mrs. John Glover Crane Bloodworth.

Rev. R. E. Elliott, officiated and Mrs. James S. Huff presented a program of musical selections. The improvised altar was formed of natural greenery and royal palms with baskets of white gladioli.

Miss Poppy Bloodworth, only sister of the bride, served as maid of honor and only attendant. Her gown was fashioned of blue net over matching tulle. A cluster of pastel flowers adorned her hair and she carried a colonial bouquet of pastel flowers.

The lovely bride was given in marriage by her father and they were met at the altar by the groom and W. Hiram Camp, who acted as best man. Her wedding gown was of white marquisette and Alençon lace posed over a tulle skirt. The bride's veil of illusion tulle was fitted to her hair with a shirred band of tulle and clusters of orange blossoms on either side. She carried a bouquet of gardenias, showered with swainsons.

An informal reception followed the ceremony.

Assisting were Mesdames George Woods, Legare Davis, E. B. Ward, W. A. Simon, E. C. McLaughlin, W. Worth Schomberg, Miss Pauline Pritchard, Miss Anne Cobb White kept the bride's book.

The bridal couple left for a wedding trip, after which they will reside on Kings Highway in Decatur, until the completion of their new home.

Next Friday evening, Mr. and Mrs. Moreton Rolleston Sr. will entertain, preceding the wedding rehearsal of their son and Miss Mooney.

Pageant Planned At Y.W.C.A. Camp.

"New Lamps for Old" will be the pageant marking the Highland day ceremonial at the Y. W. C. A. camp today. Presented at 5:30 o'clock, these exercises will mark the close of a most successful junior program. On August 2, Camp Highland will be open to all girls and women over 18 years of age, with the week of August 4-8 featuring Mother-Daughter camping, an innovation in Y service.

Monday afternoon camp grounds will be transformed into an Oriental market square, with buyers and sellers busily displaying their wares. Miss Mary Art Henry will portray Aladdin, and with words of magic she will invoke folk dances from different countries; exhibition horseback riders, and expert demonstration of sports such as tennis, swimming, badminton and archery. Articles of handmade artistry will be displayed in the market and groups around the booths will sing folk songs as guests wind their way through the crowds.

Miss Anne Segrest will typify "The Spirit of Camp Highland." Hikers will be Misses Anne McCurdy, Rose Ellen Armstrong, Helen Spaniers, Daphne Ivey, Marion Wilkes, Betty Sherman. Chosen for the archery number are Misses Virginia Goodwin, Virginia Bobe, Anne Whipple; for swimming, Misses Isabel Williamson, Jimmy Pearson, Jean Johnston, Gene Stribling; for tennis, Misses Ruth Ryner, Doris Hilton; for horseback riding, Misses Anne Radford, Jackie Turner.

The junior assembly will introduce a comedy element, and all campers will take part in the pageant. The feature of last week's activities was the selection of Miss Tommy Williams as "Miss Health" and Miss Pat Payne as "Miss Health Junior."

Miss Hunter Weds Rev. W. J. Boyd Party Is Given Engaged Couple

Miss Margaret Loraine Hunter, lovely young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Hunter, and Rev. William Joseph Boyd, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Boyd, spoke their vows at a quiet ceremony taking place yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock at the Second Presbyterian church. Rev. Thomas B. Hoover officiated.

Palms, ferns and garden flowers were used to beautify the altar.

There were no attendants, and the radiant bride was given in marriage by her father. She was becomingly attired in a two-piece ensemble of light blue sheer, with which she wore matching accessories. Her flowers were a shoulder spray of sweethearts roses and valley lilies.

Mrs. Hunter chose for her daughter's wedding a model of white crepe with white accessories trimmed with a touch of blue. Mrs. Boyd, the groom's mother, wore a costume of printed sheer with harmonizing accessories. Both wore shoulder clusters of pink carnations.

Following the ceremony the young couple left for a wedding trip by motor. The bride traveled in a spectator sports ensemble of natural palm beach embroidered with light blue flowers, with matching accessories. Upon their return the couple will reside in Decatur.

"I HAVE SOMETHING FOR YOU"

Kit Agrees To Marry in Ten Days; Kirk Comes to Tell Tracy Goodbye

By Margaret Gorman Nichols.
Author of "I'll Wait for You" and "Kiss After Midnight."

INSTALLMENT XXIII.

Kit smiled. Tracy, disciplined but gay because she would see Kirk this afternoon. Her eyes would follow him everywhere and in them would be that hope that takes so long to die.

She did not see Anita during the long, quiet afternoon. Tracy came home early, tired but stimulated. Anita joined them for dinner, addressing a few remarks to Tracy, ignoring Kit completely. And one more evening the big house was quiet and dimly lit.

The next day Kit sat at lunch. "I'm going into New York tonight for dinner, Tracy." Tracy glanced up quickly. "A date, and you didn't tell me? Mike? I'm sorry. That isn't fair, is it? Of course, go. The way you've been kept here it's been almost as if you were serving a sentence."

Serving a sentence. . . . That didn't hurt now. But she did not see Anita's sharp, inquisitive look.

Kirk was waiting in the lobby, where so many people were coming and going and waiting. He seemed to be waiting patiently, a tall young man in brown, until she saw that his eyes were warm and restless and desiring. A few moments it was as though they were the only two people in the world. They did not touch each other. They merely stood at each other. The crowded lobby and smiled at each other.

"I kept you waiting, Kirk."

"Yes, Kit. I'll keep you waiting after we are married."

"I thought the train would never get in."

"What prosaic things we say, Kit. All the while knowing that our feelings aren't prosaic. Are yours?"

"I can't kiss you here."

"I'll have to kiss you in a taxi until I can kiss you at any time during the day and night. Let's find some quiet little place where I can put your engagement ring on your finger."

A quiet little place where there was soft music. . . . a corner table. . . . a solitaire on the proper finger.

Kit said, "I'm happy and humble. I wonder why I'm so lucky. It's like wishing for one star and getting a million. . . . I love you."

"And you don't want to say good-night to me tonight any more than I want to see you go. Why don't you tell Tracy and let it over? I know she'll hate to lose you but I want you more, Kit. Yesterday afternoon no one mentioned her illness. Tracy isn't looking for sympathy and she's back on her feet again. You were right when you said she's changed. Yesterday I couldn't help noticing that she wasn't the center of attraction and didn't seem to mind an onlooker. Kit, what are you waiting for?"

"A miracle, I guess. But I can't tell her yet. I haven't found the right words and I can't ever wear my beautiful ring at home. There was the little-boy happiness in his smile. 'Let's not talk about Tracy. Let's talk about us, Kit.'"

"Us, incorporated. . . . Do you think you'll make a good aviatrix?"

"Why not?"

"Can you sail a boat?"

"No."

"I'll teach you. Where do you want to spend our honeymoon?"

"In the mountain cabin. . . ."

"Are you serious?"

"Very."

He smiled. "I approve. And we'll go up to the small inn near by and get our meals so that there won't be anybody in the cabin except us."

Kit said, "That's why. . . ."

"Would you care to dance, Mrs. Griswold? They permit embracing in public places if you pretend to dance. I want to hold you, Kit, Mrs. Griswold. . . ."

"I want to be held close, Kirk."

"I drove in town today in one of Bill's cars. We'll take a long time going back. . . ."

Later riding back to the country in the cool night with his arm around her, Kirk said, "The survey is finished, Kit. It was the most important thing in the world to me. Now you are." He drew her chestnut head against his shoulder. "Let's really get together on plans. I'm finished here. I'm grateful for Bill and Sara's hospitality and for Tracy's but I want to be on my way with you. Tell me what you think of this: I'll go down to Baltimore, leave the survey and collect the vacation that's due me. Then I'll go down to the farm and prepare mother and dad for the wedding. Meanwhile you'll have about 10 days to find Tracy a new secretary and to don't girls go on shopping sprees before they are married? My sister did. . . ."

"I hadn't thought of it. I haven't thought how I want to look as a bride. . . ."

"Just be you, Kit. That's all I want. Ten days. No longer. Ten days and 10 nights too long. Then you'll come back and get you and we'll stop in Washington and pick up your Aunt Chris. I feel as if I know Aunt Chris. I sold my car when I went out on the survey and I'll spend part of the 10 days getting a new one. . . ."

"You'll tell Tracy you're leaving? You won't just leave and not see her?"

"Of course I won't. I'll come over tomorrow and say good-bye. She pressed her head closer against his shoulder, thinking, I want to tell you to be kind to her, Kirk. You will be, I know. But it hurts when someone you love is only kind to you. I should think cruelly would be easier to take. That's the only cloudy in our sky, Kirk—Tracy. . . ."

The big house was dark when he stopped the car before it and took Kit close and kissed her. "I can't see you, Kit, but it doesn't matter. The image is indelible."

"And yours, on my heart. . . ."

"And now you know why I won't wait longer than 10 days. That would be too many good-nights like this. I think we should wake up Tracy and tell her. If she came, man, I'd be jealous of your unwillingness to leave your boss. Good-night, Kit. Good-night, my darling. . . ."

"You'll call me?"

"Every day."

"Don't come to the door with me. I'd like to go in quietly. Good-night, Kirk. Not good-bye. I'll be ready when you come back for me—ready and impatient and happy. I'm not afraid of anything or ashamed of anything."

"I'll never give you anything to regret. You'd better go in now or I won't let you go at all. . . ."

Tracy and Anita and Kit were having a leisurely luncheon on the terrace the next afternoon when Kirk came. He smiled at Kit as if their secret amused him and then drew up a chair and joined them.

Tracy seemed to come more alive. "Your peaceful days of having the house to yourself are over, aren't they, Kirk, now that Sara and Bill are back? They had a marvelous summer in California and they both look splendid. Won't you join us for luncheon?"

"No, thanks. I've had mine. And I can stay only a minute. . . ."

Kit thought, if only men knew. If only he knew how much this is going to hurt her. He can stay only a minute and Tracy wants him to stay the rest of his life with her.

"Only a minute?" she asked. "Surely longer than a minute. . . ."

He was so at ease and so happy looking that Tracy was nervous again. Kit turned her face away.

Kirk smiled. "I'm afraid not, Tracy. My job is finished and I'm on my way this afternoon. I've certainly done this job in the pleasantest surroundings imaginable, thanks to you and Sara and Bill."

Tracy's slim body was taut. "You mean you're—leaving for good this afternoon?"

"Yes, but I'll be back. I'd hate to think I was never coming back to see you and Bill and Sara. You've made a big and tedious job much easier." He smiled again. "I'd like to return the hospitality some time. . . ."

Tracy sat back. Her jaw line was sharp, her face pale.

"Yes, of course," she said slowly, quietly. "That would be lovely, Kirk. It's been—been fun knowing you and—and you've added to my summer, too. Quite."

He didn't know, Kit thought. He thought he was merely an appreciative neighbor coming to say good-bye after a pleasant summer. He loved her, Kit. And innocently he wasn't thinking how Tracy looked or felt. He was wanting her, Kit. And he was going back to plan for their marriage. For an instant she wished that he didn't love her, that he loved Tracy so that Tracy would not look as if the bottom had dropped out of her world. . . .

Tracy said, "Well, then, don't let me keep you, Kirk." She lifted her face and smiled and held out her hand. "I'd—we'd hoped to keep you permanently. . . ."

"You've been perfectly swell to me, Tracy."

"That wasn't difficult."

He took her hand for a minute. Then she drew it away. She did not take her eyes from him when he turned to Anita.

"Good-bye, Anita."

"Good-bye, Kirk. Sorry you have to go. We'll miss you."

Turning to Tracy, she said sweetly, "There's probably a girl in Baltimore, darling, who is responsible for his rushing off like this."

"There is no girl in Baltimore," he said and turned to Kit and took her familiar hand and said simply, "This isn't a good-bye either, Kit. When I come up this way again, I expect to find you here."

"I'll be here. . . ."

He left them and hurried out to the car.

Anita said, "Well, there goes Kirk. That's the last we'll ever see of him. It will be sort of dull for you with him gone, won't it, Tracy?"

"Dull?" Tracy asked. Her face was gray. "Dull, did you say? I wonder. . . ."

"Isn't it just like a man to take everything you have to give him and then walk out on you?" Anita asked.

"He didn't take anything."

Tracy said, "And I didn't give anything. He isn't walking out. He's going home."

She arose slowly and looked first at Anita and then at Kit. "I'm going in and get a few things together. I'm going away for a few days and I don't want any advice from either of you. I'm going and I don't know when I'll be back. . . ."

Kit said, "You can't. . . ."

Please don't. . . ."

But Tracy didn't listen. She walked slowly into the house.

Anita said, "Don't try to stop her. You don't know her when she makes up her mind."

"I know she won't take care of herself. She can't afford a setback and I can't let her do this. . . ."

"You're not her guardian. You're only her secretary."

Kit said, "I'm her friend and I'm going to stop her. She'll be careless. She won't take care of herself. . . ."

But Tracy had locked her door. When Kit knocked, Tracy said firmly, "I know what you want to say, Kit, but I'm not going to listen. It's no use. I'm going. There's nothing to prevent my going. You can't keep me from going. . . ."

Your Horoscope for Today

By ALICE DENTON JENNINGS, Noted Atlanta Chirologist.

What today means to you if you were born between:

March 21st and April 19th (ARIES)—An excellent day for general business and dealings with people of a conservative nature, but does not especially favor making sudden changes. The period suggests sticking to routine.

April 20th and May 20th (TAURUS)—The morning hours and until 12:15 p. m. favor important plans, dealings with people in authority, buying, selling, trading and matters connected with beauty and art. After 12:15 p. m. favors dealings with organizations and for working on affairs that have a systematic foundation.

May 21st and June 20th (GEMINI)—Before 11:50 a. m. favors attention to only ordinary and routine matters. The remainder of the day you can give full rein to your activities, whether business, sports or social.

June 21st and July 22nd (CANCER)—An excellent day for real estate transactions, correspondence, literary endeavor, dealings with relatives, industrial affairs and matters of a romantic interest. The best aspects of the day operate previous to 3:15 p. m.

July 23rd and August 22nd (LEO)—The best aspects of the day operate previous to 12:45 p. m. favoring dealings with the opposite sex, and for out-of-the-ordinary affairs. Aggressiveness should be curbed during the entire day, but those things which require energy and enthusiasm may meet splendid and quick results.

August 23rd and September 22nd (VIRGO)—Between 10:01 a. m. and 8:28 p. m. is the most favorable part of the day, when you should look at the world in a practical, matter-of-fact way. This is an especially good time for general business and hard work. After 3:28 p. m. the new or extraordinary should be shunned.

September 23rd and October 22nd (LIBRA)—Before 11:51 a. m. favors travel, quick decisions and changes. After 11:51 a. m. favors general business interests and for making harmonious arrangements with others.

October 23rd and November 21st (SCORPIO)—You are likely to meet strong antagonism during the entire day. An excellent day to control your temper and stick to routine.

November 22nd and December 21st (SAGITTARIUS)—An excellent day to attend to personal problems and minor unfinished tasks. Be especially careful of any new proposition offered to you today and stifle any tendency towards extravagance.

December 22nd and January 19th (CAPRICORN)—Previous to 7:30 p. m. disappointments are likely to come to you by expecting too much, or by a lack of preparation. After 7:30 p. m. is a favorable period for deciding important matters that you have had under consideration at this time.

January 20th and February 18th (AQUARIUS)—The morning hours and until 3:48 p. m. favor dealing in land, property and with older and stable people. New beginnings now work out favorably, but are more apt to find heavy reding. After 3:48 p. m. family and associates should be helpful. This is the time to put forward your best efforts and work on the important matters in your life.

February 19th and March 20th (PISCES)—Your judgments, especially in connection with financial affairs, close relatives and written matter, should be unusually good today. After 12:45 p. m. favors attending to matters connected with professional people and literary endeavors.

Fulton Farm To Have Spot On NBC Show

Melton Sings New Tune; Defense and Music Shows Included.

When the National Farm and Home Hour observes its 4,000th broadcast today, the program will be switched to farms in Georgia, North Dakota, California and Indiana for a word picture of agriculture in action throughout the nation.

Pickups will be made from the farm of Secretary of Agriculture Claude R. Wickard, in Carroll County, Indiana; from the garden of the Homer Lawson farm in Fulton county, Georgia; from the poultry house on the farm of D. B. Walls, near Petaluma, Cal., and from the wheat fields on the Norbert Morris farm near Wahpeton, North Dakota.

Walter Blaufuss and the Home-steaders' orchestra will be heard in musical portions of the anniversary broadcast at 11:30 a. m., CDST, over the NBC Red network and WSB.

Bringing back the shades of old Vienna, a new song based on a Strauss melody will be introduced for the first time over the radio by James Melton, star tenor of the Telephone Hour program tonight at 7 o'clock over NBC Red and WSB. The new piece written by Erich Korngold is "You Hunt My Heart."

On the same program Donald Voorhees and his 57-piece Symphonie orchestra will bring to life in music the Witches' Sabbath atop Bald Mountain.

Quite a contrast will be Chaminade's joyous "Summer," as sung by the soprano star, Francis White.

Following is the complete program:

You Hunt My Heart, by Korngold (James Melton, Tenor).
A Musical Snuff-Box, by Lisloff (Orchestra).
Every Time I Feel de Spirit, Spiritual (Chorus and Orchestra).
Summer, by Chaminade (Francis White, soprano).
A Night on Bald Mountain, by Moussorgsky (Orchestra).
Sanctus, by Gounod (James Melton and Chorus).
We Could Make Such Beautiful Music, by Mannes (James Melton and Francis White).

The federal government's efforts to prevent inflation by halting price rises are outlined tonight when Columbia network's thirty-fifth "Report to the Nation" tells the story of "Prices in the Defense Crisis." (CBS-West at 7 o'clock).

Director Brewster Morgan plans to bring his prices today compare with those of the first World War. He also will depict the background of the present rise in the price structure. The functions of the Office of Price Administration and Civilian Supplies, headed by Leon Henderson, will be outlined, and Henderson's direct powers analyzed.

Margaret Speaks will feature two songs by Gounod, "Sing, Smile, Slumber" and the "Jewel Song" from "Faust," during the concert tonight at 7:30 o'clock over the NBC-Red network and WSB. The soprano also will sing "Still as the Night," by Bohm, and "La Paloma," by Yradier.

Alfred Wallenstein will lead the orchestra.

The program:

Oriens Overture, by Offenbach (Orchestra).
Still As the Night, by Bohm (Miss Spinks, soprano).
Turkey in the Straw, by Steiner (Orchestra).
Sing, Smile, Slumber, by Gounod; Jewel Song from "Faust," by Gounod (Miss Spinks).
Romance, by Sibelius (Orchestra).
La Paloma, by Yradier (Miss Spinks).

Defense workers, from the wheat grower to the munitions mechanic, will be saluted by the Contented program tonight at 9 o'clock over the NBC-Red network and WSB. The new Irving Berlin tune, "Arms for the Love of America" will be presented by the chorus and orchestra, directed by Percy Faith, as a special greeting to the united laborers.

Solo offerings will feature Lee Childs, guest soprano, singing "None But the Lonely Heart," by Tschakovsky, and Tenor William Miller singing "An Old Refrain."

Crime Is Bared.

Finding of a skeleton furnished final proof to the police of Buenos Aires, Argentina, of a murder committed seven years ago. The disappearance of Vicente Persiane was reported in 1934, but it was not until two years ago that the police received an anonymous letter saying Persiane had been slain. Search began for an odd-job man, Di Blassi, and recently he was brought back from Paraguay. He confessed and led the police to the grave, which was under the kitchen of a new house built on the lot.

Wage and Hour

Inspectors

Arrive Today

Atlanta Establishments

To Be Visited by Three

Federal Crews.

Inspectors of the Wage and Hour Division today will begin an inspection of all Atlanta business establishments that come under the fair labor standards act, it was announced yesterday by J. R. McLeod, regional director for Georgia, Florida and South Carolina.

The Atlanta inspection will be similar to the inspections completed in Savannah and Augusta, McLeod said, and will be for the purpose of aiding the businessman to comply with all phases of the labor act. The inspection will be under the direct supervision of William H. Little, senior inspector, and Inspector Clem J. Denicke.

Three crews of inspectors will be in the field. They will be led by Senior Inspector Homer S. Patterson and Inspectors Jack L. Daniel and Ernest T. Mitchell. Atlanta agencies for firms engaged in interstate commerce will be given special attention, McLeod said.

The inspecting forces have been instructed to call attention to minor and inadvertent violations of the act, and to aid employers in correction and future compliance with the act.

In discussing the inspection, Little pointed out that many employers were of the opinion that they had to have a certain number of employees before they came under the act. He pointed out that a firm employing only one person could come under the act, and those that come under the law must pay a minimum wage of 30 cents per hour for a 40-hour week and time and half for time over 40 hours over 40 worked in a week.

Funeral Today

For Miss Allen

Funeral rites for Miss Willette A. Allen, 82, founder of Atlanta's first kindergarten, who died Saturday at a private sanitarium, will be conducted at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon at Spring Hill.

The Rev. Nat. G. Long and the Rev. N. C. McPherson will officiate and burial will be in Douglasville.

A native of Ohio, Miss Allen for many years was a resident of Douglasville, Ga., but in 1885 came to Atlanta and established the first kindergarten on Washington street.

George Cites Firm U.S. Stand On Philippines

Japanese Move Would Not Be Tolerated, Senator Says.

WASHINGTON, July 27.—(UP)—Chairman Walter F. George, Democrat, Georgia, of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, declared tonight that if Japan moves against the Philippines "the United States must take definite steps and carry them out resolutely," but he looked for the use of only economic sanctions against the Japanese by this country for the time being.

Two Savannah Fliers Killed as Plane Crashes

Light Monoplane Goes Into Spin Mile From Airport.

SAVANNAH, Ga., July 27.—(AP)—Two youthful Savannah fliers were killed late yesterday when their airplane, a light two-place monoplane, went into a spin and crashed into the woods about a mile south of the Savannah airport.

John Henry Davis Jr., 23, the pilot of the plane, died almost instantly. His body was extricated from the wreckage by a crash crew from the Savannah air base and county police officers.

Colon Bernard "Bunny" Mulligan, 19, passenger for the trip, died in a local hospital about three hours after the crash.

The spot where the plane buried its nose in the mucky ground is about half a mile from the Savannah airport. Witnesses at the Savannah airport who were watching the plane, said it a jarringly stalled and then went into a spin before crashing.

The plane had been rented from Strachan Airways, Inc., by the two young men earlier in the afternoon.

PLANES BY THE DOZENS—If Uncle Sam had a trio of skilled workmen to turn out planes as quickly as the three Atlanta boys above make model ships, then he wouldn't stroke his long white beard so much as he frets about defense preparations. Here the boys are with some of their models—not all by a long shot—but a few of them. The youthful craftsmen are (left to right) Wyndell Muse, Billy Palmour and David Beaty. E-Boat Attack On Malta Ends In Broken Fleet

Fascists Seek to Emulate D'Annunzio in Daring Raid.

LONDON, July 27.—(AP)—Daring young Italian Fascists who sought to emulate the World War deeds of the poet-hero, d'Annunzio with a torpedo and speed boat attack on Britain's island fortress of Malta met with disaster and their expedition probably was wiped out with 17 tiny craft smashed, the British said today.

It was just before 5 a. m. Saturday, said a joint admiralty, war office and air ministry communiqué, when a squadron of Italian E-boats, armed speedboats, was detected attempting to penetrate the harbor at Valetta.

Five blew up or sank at once under a hail of fire from shore artillery, said the British, before the British said the RAF then took up the battle, chasing the remaining E-boats which were trying to "extricate themselves" and sank four more of them, damaging others.

Italian planes, which at this point endeavored to cover the sea attack were routed, said the British, with a loss of three Italian planes to one British.

Penetrated Boom.

The Italians have said their secret torpedo-carrying assault boats, requiring the greatest skill and experience in handling, are manned by the nerviest volunteers.

These boats penetrated the boom net and fired on May 26, the Italians declared, and damaged the cruiser York, subsequently destroyed by German bombing.

A similar attempt was made to penetrate the defenses of Gibraltar.

Exploits with torpedo speedboats form some of the brightest chapters in the traditions of the Italian navy, particularly in the World War.

The late Gabriele d'Annunzio had some of his most fantastic adventures on these speedboat raids. The Italians once penetrated the harbor at Trieste with them and sank two Austro-Hungarian battleships and at another time attacked the Austro-Hungarian fleet and sank another battleship.

Seized Radio To Be Returned To Nazi Owner

German Embassy Files Strong Demand for Transmitter.

BUENOS AIRES, July 27.—(AP)—In response to a strong complaint by the German embassy, the Argentine foreign ministry announced tonight it would insist that a congressional committee restore to the embassy a confiscated portable radio transmitter.

The committee, investigating anti-Argentine activities, seized the transmitter yesterday after the apparatus made a costly round trip to Peru as "diplomatic baggage."

A high Argentine informant said the 500-pound radio outfit was taken from Buenos Aires June 21 by an attaché of the German legation in Lima. He paid $1 a pound to take it by airplane, but only 44 pounds of diplomatic baggage could be admitted without being opened for inspection.

Rather than open his bulky package, he returned to Argentina with it, but it was taken by police at Cordoba and brought here, where the congressional committee opened it.

Atlanta Polio Situation Seen As Improving

No New Cases Reported Here; State Figures Unavailable.

No new polio cases were reported yesterday within the city of Atlanta, Dr. J. F. Hackney, city health officer, said, but the State Department of Health was closed and no figures on statewide conditions were available.

Dr. Hackney pointed out that the situation was improving for Atlanta with a total of 68 cases reported, and only nine new cases the past week compared with 18 new cases the previous week.

The state's total of infantile paralysis cases stood at 237, which represented an increase of 75 cases for the week ending at noon Saturday.

Dr. Dan C. Bowdoin, state epidemiologist, was out of the city and could not be reached for comment. Georgia's total of polio cases represented approximately one person in every 10,000.

44 Succumb, 34 Drown in Torrid Wave

Cincinnati Sizzles at 104.8 Degrees; Rain Cools Corn Belt.

A stifling blanket of hot, moist air clung to the eastern two-thirds of the nation yesterday as the number of heat deaths mounted to at least 44 and deaths by drownings to 34.

Showers temporarily routed 90 and 100-plus temperatures in the plains states and in scattered areas elsewhere, but no lasting relief was in sight.

The temperature reached a five-year high of 104.8 degrees at Cincinnati, where the torrid wave was in its fourth day. Other unofficial highs for the day were:

Cleveland, 102; Indianapolis, 100; Toledo, 100; Charleston, W. Va., 100; Louisville, 100; Washington, 94; Chicago, 97; Grand Rapids, Mich., 95; Bismarck, N. D., 96; Minneapolis, 92; Milwaukee, 97; and Kansas City, 96.

Showers, where the mercury reached 93, 3-year-old Joan Kilkeary climbed into the family refrigerator to get cool and slammed the door. Her parents found her unhurt, after a frantic search.

Wind and lightning damaged buildings and injured three persons as showers broke a six-day heat wave in parts of Iowa. Rains ranging up to six inches revived parched corn lands in Nebraska, but caused slight flood damage along the Republican river.

Minnesota led all states in heat deaths with 17. Other states with heat fatalities were Wisconsin, seven; New York, seven; Iowa, three; Illinois, three; Ohio, two; Pennsylvania, two; and Nebraska, South Dakota and Michigan one each.

Wisconsin had eight drownings; Ohio, seven; Kentucky, six; Iowa, four; Nebraska, two; Connecticut, two; and New York, Michigan, District of Columbia, Illinois and Maryland, one each.

Compromise Offer Vetoed in Key West Vote

Workers Favor Continuing Defense Strike, 314 to 156.

By The Associated Press.

Workers who walked off defense jobs at Key West, Fla., last week voted yesterday against returning to work for a compromise wage increase to 50 cents an hour.

The vote for continuing the strike was 314 to 156.

Lieutenant Albert J. Fay, naval station public works officer, had announced that the Navy would take civil service laborers to Key West to take over the jobs should the compromise be refused.

More than 800 workers on strike seek a wage scale of 62 1-2 cents an hour, the rate in effect at Miami, instead of the 40 cents previously paid.

Fay later said he had received no additional word from the Navy Department about importing civil service workers to continue construction of a submarine base, an air base and a Navy housing project.

Negroes Favor Compromise.

W. P. Thurston, one of the contractors, said he would resume work today unless he received instructions to the contrary.

Most of the sentiment for accepting the compromise came from members of the local AFL-affiliated Negro Layers' union. A majority of the white local favored continuing the strike.

About 125 of the Negroes returned to work on one project Saturday for an hour. They were permitted to leave in order not to complicate the balloting yesterday.

Nearly 1,000 workers were involved in the strike last Wednesday, but contractors on the two largest housing projects met the demanded 62 1-2 cents and more than 100 strikers returned to their jobs.

The compromise offer was flatly rejected by Charles Albury, union official, and yesterday's vote backed up his action.

The strike has virtually halted work on about $2,000,000 of defense projects.

Kearny Ballot Scheduled.

Meanwhile, CIO employees of the Federal Shipbuilding & Dry Dock Company in Kearny, N. J., voted to ballot secretly on the Defense Mediation Board's recommendation for a modified union shop at the plant.

John J. Green, national president of the International Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers of America (CIO), announced the decision after a four-hour meeting of about 4,000 members of the union's Local 16, which claims 14,000 of the 17,000 federal employees as members.

Voting will take place today and tomorrow. One provision of the board's recommendation would necessitate another meeting to decide whether to continue negotiations or strike, Green said.

Federal, a United States Steel subsidiary, is working around the clock on $493,000,000 worth of naval and merchant ship orders.

Fruco Resumes Work.

Construction work at the government's $89,000,000 small arms ammunition plant in St. Louis will be resumed on a small scale today while negotiations for settlement of a strike of AFL laborers await return of a high union official from Washington.

J. R. Marshall, personnel director for the Fruco Construction Company, said one-third of the total of 7,500 employees were expected to return to their jobs to do as much work as possible without the laborers.

Only a crew of maintenance men was on duty at the plant yesterday following the walkout of members of the AFL Laborers and Hod Carriers Union Saturday night in protest against the discharge of two ice haulers for idling.

The strike, involving approximately 2,200 laborers, followed by three days the council's pledge of no work stoppages on defense projects.

Murray Hits Legislation.

Philip Murray, president of the CIO, opposing legislation which would authorize the President to take over defense plants when production was delayed, declared in Washington last night it would abolish rights of labor.

"The bill is not intended to exercise any compulsion against management, but only against labor," he asserted in a letter to all members of congress.

He said authority which would be granted the President "is not to requisition the plants, but merely to take possession," and declared "the bill aims solely at breaking strikes, and thereafter returning property to management."

"In other words," he wrote, "profits of management are not to be disturbed, but the rights of labor are to be abolished."

8 Killed as Fast Train Hits Auto

DAYTON, Ohio, July 27.—(AP)—Eight persons en route home from a family reunion were killed late today in a grade crossing accident a mile west of Dayton. All lived at West Carrollton, Ohio.

All of the victims, including four children, were riding in one automobile which was struck broadside by the second section of the Pennsylvania railroad's No. 66 en route from St. Louis to New York.

Deputy Sheriff Earl Frederick identified three of the victims as Otto Kline, 35; his wife, Villa, about 50, and their son, Ralph. The others were identified tentatively by Mrs. Ben F. Reel as her son, Walter H. Reel, 32; Walter's wife, Mildred, 36; and their three children, Betty, 5; Billy, 3, and Ruth Ann, 2.

Scrap Scarcity Seen as Threat To Steel Output

Foresight Could Have Prevented Shortage, Magazine Says.

CLEVELAND, July 27.—(AP)—Production of steelworks and foundries is "on the point of being throttled because of the difficulty of obtaining adequate supplies of iron and steel scrap," the magazine "Steel" declared today.

"Curtailed of ingot production for lack of scrap within the next three or four weeks was foreseen by steel producers and defense agency officials last week," the magazine asserted.

"Some slight reductions in operations already have been ascribed to shortage of this raw material, although the national operating rate continues at 97 per cent. In the central eastern seaboard district production last week was down 1.5 points due to the scrap scarcity and steelmakers said further reductions would follow in a few weeks if more adequate supplies were not forthcoming. One producer who has been able to maintain production so far said the present rate could be increased if sufficient scrap and pig iron were available. In the Detroit area the supply outlook is becoming more critical."

"Steel" observed that "with the proper foresight we could have retained at least 6,000,000 tons of the more than 10,000,000 tons of scrap which we turned over to potential enemies from 1936 to 1940," and ascribed the shortage "to a total of unfortunate blunders." To "profit from them," it suggested that the President appoint "one competent man to head defense; put the scrap problem up to experienced men; charge them with the responsibility of getting scrap—regardless of politics, social concerns, economic theories, prejudice, fear, favor or red tape. Then we will have scrap."

While the steel situation becomes even tighter, the review said "there are few, if any, instances of steel users' shutting down from lack of materials, even those engaged in nondefense work."

Norwegian Predicts Early Defeat of Axis

ROCKAWAY, N. J., July 27.—(AP)—Carl J. Hambro, former president of the Norwegian parliament and President of the League of Nations, told a cheering throng of his countrymen today that "the uninvited guests will be driven out of Norway."

Hambro, addressing a picnic rally at Lake Telemark, expressed belief that Norway would soon be free of Nazi domination and that the Axis powers would be defeated.

ALUMINUM COLLECTED.

McDONOUGH, Ga., July 27.—Mayor John J. Fisher, of McDonough, was in charge of the aluminum collection week and reported ready response on the part of local citizens. A huge box was kept in front of the post office during the week and an assortment of old utensils was deposited there each day.
